Allies Agree to Joint War, Peace Compact

China Party To Accord At Moscow Conference

Powers Pledge Fight to Finish; Will Establish London Council

By Edward T. Folliard

The Big Four of the Allied cause—the United States, Great Britain, Russia and China—stood pledged today to hammer their foes into unconditional surrender, and to continue then as partners in a great world organization to keep the peace.

The epochal agreement, which will go down in history as the Pact of Moscow, was announced to the world yesterday in statements issued simultaneously from Washington, London and the Russian capital.

Inclusion of China in the pact, giving her recognition as one of the great powers, came as a happy surprise to most people in Washington. This, of course, did not in any way involve Russia in the war against Japan, since the Four-Nations declaration used the term "respective" enemies.

Allies 'o Dovetail Plans

Even so, the fact that Russia was willing to enter into an agreement with a country whose sole active enemy is Japan was thought to be very significant. It was recalled that when the Russians refused to attend Anglo-American war conferences at Casablanca and Quebec, one explanation was that Russia had a neutrality pact with Japan.

Out of the 12-day conference of Secretary of State Hull, Foreign Secretary Eden and Foreign Commissar Molotov came an announcement that Anglo-American strategy and Russian strategy would be dovetailed so as to "shorten the war against Germany and her satellites." There was an implication, too, that the plans for a second front had at last won all-around approval.

The three powers promised Austria, first victim of Hitler, that she would get her freedom. They reminded Austria, however, that she would help her cause by joining in the war on her conqueror.

Italian Help Pledged

They pledged themselves to help the Italian people establish a government based on democratic principles—a government that will include elements that always opposed fascism and which will guarantee freedom of speech, of religious worship, of political belief, of press

Text of Compact Adopted By Four Powers at Moscow

The texts of declarations signed at the historic Moscow conferenece of Secretary of State Hull, Foreign Minister Anthony Eden and Foreign Commissar Molotov, follow:

JOINT FOUR-NATION DECLARATION

THE governments of the United States of America, United Kingdom, the Soviet Union and China:

United in their determination, in accordance with the declaration by the United Nations of January 1, 1942, and subsequent declarations, to continue hostilities against those Axis powers with which they respectively are at war until such powers have laid down their arms on the basis of unconditional surrender;

Conscious of their responsibility to secure the liberation of themselves and the peoples allied with them from the menace of aggression;

Recognizing the necessity of insuring a rapid and orderly transition from war to peace and of establishing and maintaining international peace and security with the least diversion of the world's human and economic resources for armaments;

Jointly declare:

1. That their united action, pledged for the prosecution of the war against their respective enemies, will be continued for the organization and maintenance of peace and security.

2. That those of them at war with a common enemy will act together in all matters relating to the surrender and disarmanent of that enemy.

3. That they will take all measures deemed by them to be necessary to provide against any violation of the terms imposed upon the enemy.

4. That they recognize the necessity of establishing at the earliest practicable date a general international organization, based on the principle of the sovereign equality of all peace-loving states, and open to membership by all such states, large and small, for the maintenance of international peace and security.

5. That for the purpose of maintaining international peace and security pending the reestablishment of law and order and the inauguration of a system of general security, they will consult with one another and as occasion requires with other members of the United Nations with a view to joint action on behalf of the community of nations.

6. That after the termination of hostilities they will not employ their military forces within the territories of other states except for the purposes envisaged in this declaration and after joint consultation.

7. That they will confer and cooperate with one another and with other members of the United Nations to bring about a practicable general agreement with respect to the regulation of armaments in the postwar period.

DECLARATION REGARDING ITALY

Senate Moves To Approve Moscow Pact

By Robert C. Albright

A move to incorporate the four-power agreement in the pending Senate resolution of postwar objectives started up in the Senate yesterday, as Senators almost to a man indorsed the understanding reached at Moscow.

Substitution of the terms of the Allied agreement for the Senate's far milder postwar declaration was proposed by Senator Scott W. Lucas (Democrat) of Illinois, but two opposing Senate factions drew back from the suggestion.

Foreign Relations Chairman Tom Connally said the Moscow decisions are in "substantial conformity" with his compromise resolution on postwar policy, and flatly objected to any change.

Sponsors of a stronger Senate declaration countered that adoption of the compromise now would "repudiate" the Moscow stand, and called for acceptance of the so-called "B-2 H-2" amendment, which they likewise called in line with

Nazi Victims To Be Avenged At War Trials

By Flora Lewis
Associated Press Staff Writer

Devising an unprecedented treatment for war criminals, the three powers represented at Moscow held out the direst possible fate to ravaging Germans and at the same time satisfied one of Russia's major doubts about Western postwar plans.

President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin declared that as soon as an armistice is granted "to any government which may be set up in Germany," those responsible for war atrocities will be delivered to their victims for punishment.

They added a grim warning to those Germans whose hands are still clean of innocent blood not to "join the ranks of the guilty."

The new plan to put the accused into the hands of the people they have outraged varies sharply from the procedure followed in the last war.

Then, the Allied governments charged the Weimar Republic with

Hull Declares Moscow Pact Ends 'Route To Isolationism'

By Eddy Gilmore

Moscow, Nov. 1 (AP).—Secretary of State Cordell Hull is pleased with the results of the tripower conference concluded here today; there is no doubt about it.

The three big powers, along with China, told the world they were jointly determined to crush their enemies into unconditional surrender and then [illegible] together for "international peace and security."

[Hull was quoted by International News Service as having declared that with the signing of the Moscow agreements, the leading United Nations powers have abandoned the "hermit route to isolationism."—Editor's Note:]

The Secretary of State was pale but his voice was firm and steady as he sat in Spasso House, his right leg swung over his left and his long tapering hands, as expressive as a symphony orchestra leader's, sketching designs in the air as he made points in discussing the conference.

Hull believes firmly that any isolationism on the part of either of the three powers is not a possibility.

After the conclusion of the conferences with British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Soviet Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov, Hull sat in a soft brown leather chair in the official residence of Ambassador W. Averell Harriman and talked of what he thought about the world before the war, what he thought about the world before he came to Russia and what he thought about it now.

The Secretary thinks things are going to be a lot better between the Allies. He thinks we have

London (Tuesday), Nov. 2 (AP).—The Red army trapped tens of thousands of Germans in the Crimea yesterday by cutting the Perekop isthmus, and Moscow announced early today that one fleeing enemy group above the peninsula had been surrounded, losing 2000 killed and 6000 captured in a continuing battle of annihilation.

Nearly 5000 Germans also were killed and scores of tanks, guns and trucks were captured or destroyed in fresh Russian gains inside the Dnieper River bend, Moscow said, as the Red army reached the lower Dnieper River 15 miles above the Kakhovka crossing in its pursuit of demoralized German troops, thousands of whom have perished on the Nogaisk steppe.

Smash Toward Peninsula

In sealing off the Crimea the Russians stormed and captured Perekop, on the isthmus of that name, and smashed 5 miles beyond across the narrow land bridge toward the Crimea.

The Germans faced one of their greatest disasters since Stalingrad, where their Sixth Army of 350,000 men was lost. The Nazi Crimean forces are believed to number less than that, since some have been evacuated. The Russians themselves had only 200,000 in the area when they lost it in the 1941-42 fighting.

Gen. Feodor Tolbukhin's victorious Fourth Ukraine Army drove 5 miles ahead into both narrow corridors linking the Crimea with the mainland, at Perekop and at Novoalekseyevka.

Sea, Air Only Escape Routes

Other units racing westward above the Crimea converged on the Kakhovka and Nikopol crossings of the lower Dnieper River to join two other Russian armies inside the Dnieper bend, where fresh Red army gains also were made.

Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific (Tuesday), Nov. 2 (AP).—American ground forces captured Empress Augusta Bay in a bold invasion of west-central Bougainville island at dawn Monday, 260 miles away from Japan's big key base of Rabaul, and General MacArthur challenged the Japanese navy to come out and fight.

Cognizant that this big move threatened to unhinge the entire Japanese position in the Southwest Pacific and that the enemy must consider strong counter measures, General MacArthur said:

"If the Jap fleet comes out, I will welcome it. I will throw everything we have against it."

Little Opposition Encountered

This invasion of Bougainville, translating into air, naval and amphibious action strategy planned by General MacArthur, Admiral Halsey and other high officials, moved the Allies 200 miles from the scene of their recent victories in the central Solomons.

The attacking force, which achieved its initial landings with such surprise that little opposition was encountered, although perhaps 40,000 of the enemy were not far off, thus by-passed Japanese positions on southern Bougainville and placed all enemy forces there in peril if they chose to remain.

The Japanese positions on the Shortland Islands, 15 miles south of Bougainville, and on newly invaded Treasury and Choiseul Islands also were by-passed.

Rabaul Reinforced

The Americans gained their beachhead about half way up the west coast of the largest Solomon island, the last one between the invaders and Rabaul.

Explaining the strategy and objectives of the Bougainville operation at a special conference at his headquarters October 31, General MacArthur said repeated heavy air

Ten Never Show Up

Yank Paratroops Hold Fire While Missing Men Drift In

This is the third in a series of first person stories, revealing the thrilling experiences of Lieut. Justin T. McCarthy, a paratrooper from East Orange, N. J., in the American paratroop attack near Avellino, Italy, during the drive of our forces on Naples. The first two instalments of Lieutenant McCarthy's story told of the jump into hostile territory, the march to the little town of Cassano, and setting up of a strategic position on a hill overlooking the town. Those moves occupied the first night. In the morning the troopers, from their hilltop, watched German armored cars searching for them in the town.

By Lieut. Justin T. McCarthy
(As Told to Richard Tregaskis)

On the Italian Front, Nov. 1 (INS).—We didn't fire on the Germans in the town from our hill position; even though we could see their tanks and men moving up and down the streets.

Major Dudley decided we should sit tight, because men of our outfit who had got lost in the jump the night before, were joining us by twos and threes, and it seemed likely that by nightfall we would have a fairly large force; then we would be able to move and do some damage.

About ten of our men, part of those who had remained behind in the town when we climbed the hill the night before, never did rejoin us. We heard later that some of them were captured, and some killed, in fighting with the Germans down there. I know I heard a Browning automatic rifle, one of our weapons, amongst the firing.

One of the men who did get away from the Germans in the town, and reached our hill, was Pfc. Guy W. Jeanes of San Augustine, Tex. He had been caught at a waterhole that morning by a bunch of Germans, and had killed two of them and made a clean getaway.

During the day more of the paratroopers drifted in from the hills, by ones and twos and threes. They had been looking around for other paratroops during the night; the main problem of the jump being as usual to get sizeable bunches of men together.

The town was fairly quiet the rest of that day: No gunfire, but some enemy trucks passing through the streets, many of them going north, away from the front.

About noontime the Italians brought us some food—loaves of bread and a delicious cheese. Capt. Edmund J. Tomasik of New Bedford, Mass., the supply officer, found some of the parabundles he'd been looking for during the night. Some of them contained food; but unfortunately we couldn't have retrieved them without giving away our position. They were dangling from some trees, out in the Statement by President On Seizure of Coal Mines

The statement by the President on seizure of the coal mines follows:

FOR some time we have not been producing the coal which we need to fight the war. When we should be working to increase to the utmost the production of coal, production has stopped because of the failure of the miners to return to their work.

I have been obliged to direct the Secretary of the Interior to take immediate possession of the mines and to operate them for the Government.

Because I appreciate the desire of the miners to work under a contract, I have authorized the Secretary of the Interior to enter into collective bargaining contracts with representatives of the miners to govern the terms and conditions of employment during the period of Government operation. Such contracts will be made in accordance with the recent opinion of the National War Labor Board and will be subject to its approval in accordance with the provision of the War Labor Disputes Act.

AS President of the United States and as Commander in Chief of the Armed Forces, I call upon every miner to return without a day's delay to the mines.

The grievances of the miners have been heard. They have been fairly dealt with. The Government offers the miners a fair contract. They have no right in wartime to refuse to work under it.

Coal must be mined. The enemy does not wait. The failure to mine coal at this critical moment is impeding the prosecution of the war and endangering the lives of our sons and brothers, the sons and brothers of the miners, on the battlefields.

The mines will be opened by the Government on Wednesday morning. Every miner will be expected to be at his post of duty, ready to work for his Government.

Allies Capture Key Junction Town in Italy

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Nov. 1 (AP).—The Allied Fifth and Eighth armies, laboring forward in mud and rain, have captured 21 more Italian towns and villages, including Teano, in grim fighting at the approaches to the Germans' massive new transpeninsula defense barrier.

Teano, important road junction 10 miles northeast of the enemy's towering Mount Massico stronghold, fell to Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's American Fifth Army after a one-mile uphill fight against elements of the crack Hermann Goering Division.

In another thrust, American troops advanced five miles through downpours and up dizzy mountain slopes to take Valleagricola, on a 2000-foot hill four miles north of Raviscanina.

The British Eighth Army was pinned down by heavy rain and stiff Nazi resistance along the Trigno River near the Adriatic end of the battle line, but in the mountainous interior smashed through 15 towns and villages to within nine miles of the big communications junction of Isernia, central pivot of the German line.

Capture of Teano gave the Fifth Army possession of a valuable network of roads for the impending drive to pierce the formidable Massico Ridge line of the southwestern extremity of the front. Captured documents showed the Germans attached tremendous importance to holding Teano.

The United States Twelfth Air Force opened a powerful new offensive, designed to wreck the enormous supply system that gives the Germon front its lifeblood.

Bombers attacked Genoa, Savona, Imperia and Porto Maurizio on the Ligurian Riviera, the ports of Civitavecchia and Anzio in the Rome area and a railway and road viaduct near Cannes in southern France.

Ramspeck Sees Miner Draft As Strike Cure

House Majority Whip Robert Ramspeck told The Post yesterday in an interview that if the miners refuse to return to work after Government seizure of the mines, "there seems to me to be only one course of action left."

"That would be to amend the draft act, put the miners in the Army and assign them to duty in the mines," said Ramspeck.

"If this should become necessary, then the managers or other experienced persons needed to supervise the operation of the mines would also have to be placed in the Army as officers, and assigned to the duty of commanding the troops assigned to duty in the mines."

Ramspeck said he hoped "no such drastic action will be necessary, but we cannot win the war without coal—it must be produced or the war industries will cease to operate."

Ramspeck said he feared the Connally-Smith Act "probably cannot reach the situation as it is developing."

That act makes it unlawful to strike when the Government is operating the mines, but the Georgia Congressman pointed out that the Government did not have possession when they struck, and expressed doubt that remaining on strike after the Government took over "could be established as a violation of the act.

Department of Justice officials have operated on the assumption that each additional day's stoppage could be treated as a separate offense, but this interpretation has never been put to a test.

New Union Contract Agreed On

Fighter Output at Brewster Tripled in Month, Says Kaiser

By Mary Spargo

Henry J. Kaiser revealed last night that the Brewster Aeronautical Corp., currently under congressional fire, tripled its production of Corsair fighter planes in October, and at the same time announced that the company and the UAW-CIO union would sign a new contract today, bringing more than a year's labor strife to an end.

Kaiser, who assumed the Brewster presidency without salary October 7 at the request of the Government, said the Brewster plants furnished the Navy with 27 Corsair fighters in October, as against 8 in September. In addition, the plants produced 30 Navy bombers, 18 of which were accepted and 12 completed but not yet tested.

During the same month the Brewster plants, which have been operated as modification as well as manufacturing centers, made changes ordered by the Navy in 74 bombers. In two months the Brewster plant will be turned into a production center only, thus removing the modification work and allowing greater production.

Although the production picture at Brewster is vastly improved repercussions from the House Naval Affairs Committee investigation, originally started because of production failure, are spreading daily.

At almost the same time that the War Labor Board was announcing that the relationship between the new management of Brewster and the union was "splendid," Kaiser declared that the War Labor

Bold Stroke

By Ben W. Gilbert

Moving to bring the fourth general coal strike this year to an abrupt halt, President Roosevelt last night seized the Nation's coal mines a second time and ordered 530,000 striking miners to return to their jobs tomorrow morning.

Turning the mines over to Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes, who immediately took formal possession of all pits capable of producing a carload or more of coal a day, the President thus made United Mine Worker President John L. Lewis and other union officials subject to the criminal provisions of the Connally-Smith War Labor Disputes Act.

Penalties of a year in prison and a $5000 fine for any action encouraging a stoppage in a Government-held plant are provided by the antistrike law.

Owners Made Managers

Ickes designated the heads of the various mine companies as operating managers for the Government and instructed them to fly the American flag over the estimated 3300 mines seized and to post notices that they were in Government hands.

The President's order contained a formula for settling the coal wage controversy. Ickes was authorized to negotiate a collective bargaining agreement with Lewis for the period of Government operation, subject to approval by the War Labor Board and within the framework of the board's Illinois soft coal decision and other WLB directives.

Under the Connally-Smith Act, prevailing wages and working conditions must be maintained in a seized plant unless changed by order of the War Labor Board.

"As President of the United States and as Commander in Chief of the Armed Forces, I call upon every miner to return without a day's delay to the mines," the President said in a statement accompanying the mine seizure executive order.

"Fair Contract" Offered

"The grievances of the miners have been heard," Mr. Roosevelt said. "They have been fairly dealt with. The Government offers the miners a fair contract. They have no right in wartime to refuse to work under it."

Ickes did not have the power to make a contract with the miners under the original executive order seizing the mines exactly six

President Defends Food Subsidies

President Roosevelt, in a message to Congress on the food situation, yesterday defended use of subsidies to keep the cost of living under control, contending that they save money for both consumers and the Government. There were indications that the message would fan into flame the smoldering anti-subsidy fight in Congress.

Text of Agreement Adopted By U. S., Britain, Russia, China

and configuration shall be completely destroyed and that the Italian people shall be given every opportunity to establish governmental and other institutions based upon democratic principles

The foreign secretaries of the United States and United Kingdom declare that the action of their governments from the inception of the invasion of Italian territory, in so far as paramount military requirements have permitted has been based upon this policy.

In furtherance of this policy in the future the foreign secretaries of the three governments are agreed that the following measures are important and should be put into effect:

1. It is essential that the Italian government should be made more democratic by inclusion of representatives of those sections of the Italian people who have always opposed fascism.

2. Freedom of speech, of religious worship, of political belief, of press and of public meeting shall be restored in full measure to the Italian people who shall also be entitled to form anti-Fascist political groups.

3. All institutions and organizations created by the Fascist regime shall be suppressed.

4. All Fascist or pro-Fascist elements shall be removed from the administration and from institutions and organizations of a public character.

5. All political prisoners of the Fascist regime shall be released and accorded full amnesty.

6. Democratic organs of local government shall be created.

7. Fascist chiefs and army generals known or suspected to be war criminals shall be arrested and handed over to justice.

In making this declaration the three foreign secretaries recognize that so long as active military operations continued in Italy the time at which it is possible to give full effect to the principles stated above will be determined by the commander in chief on the basis of instructions received through the combined chiefs of staff.

The three governments, parties to this declaration, will at the request of any one of them, consult on this matter. It is further understood that nothing in this resolution is to operate against he right of the Italian people ultimately to choose their own form of government.

Declaration on Austria

The governments of the United Kingdom, the Soviet Union and the United States of America are agreed that Austria, the first free country to fall a victim to Hitlerite aggression, shall be liberated from German domination.

They regard the annexation imposed on Austria by Germany on March 15, 1938, as null and void. They consider themselves as in no way bound by any changes effected in Austria since that date. They declare that they wish to see reestablished a free and independent Austria, and thereby to open the way for the Austrian people themselves as well as those neighboring states which will be faced with similar problems, to find that political and economic security which is the only basis for lasting peace.

Austria is reminded, however, that she has a responsibility, which she cannot evade, for participation in the war at the side of Hitlerite Germany, and that in the final settlement account will inevitably be taken of her own contribution to her liberation.

Statement signed by President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin regarding atrocities.

The United Kingdom, the United States and the Soviet Union have received from many quarters evidence of atrocities, massacres and coldblooded mass executions which are being perpetrated by Hitlerite forces in many of the countries they have overrun and from which they are now being steadily expelled. The brutalities of Nazi domination are no new thing and all peoples or territories in their grip have suffered from the worst form of government by terror.

What is new is that many of these territories are now being redeemed by the advancing armies of the liberating powers and that in their desperation, the recoiling Hitlerites and Huns are redoubling their ruthless cruelties. This is now evidenced with particular clearness by monstrous crimes on the territory of the Soviet Union which is being liberated from Hitlerites, and on French and Italian territory.

Accordingly, the aforesaid three Allied powers, speaking in the interests of the 32 United Nations, hereby solemnly declare and give full warning of their declaration as follows: At the time of granting of any armistice to any government which may be set up in Germany, those German officers and men and members of the Nazi Party who have been responsible for or have taken a consenting part in the above atrocities, massacres and executions will be sent back to the countries in which their abominable deeds were done in order that they may be judged and punished according to the laws of these liberated countries and of the free governments which will be erected therein.

Lists will be compiled in all possible detail from all these countries, having regard especially to invaded parts of the Soviet Union, to Poland and Chechoslovakia, to Yugoslavia and Greece, including Crete and other islands, to Norway, Denmark, Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg, France and Italy.

Thus, Germans who take part in wholesale shootings of Polish officers or in the execution of French Dutch, Belgian or Norwegian hostages or of Cretain peasants, or have shared in slaughters inflicted on the people of Poland or in territories of the Soviet Union which are now being swept clear of the enemy, will know they will be brought back to the scene of their crimes and judged on the spot by the peoples whom they have outraged.

Let those who have hitherto not imbrued their hands with innocent blood beware lest they join the ranks of the guilty, for most assuredly the three Allied powers will pursue them to the uttermost ends of the earth and will deliver them to their accusers in order that justice may be done.

The above declaration is without prejudice to the case of German criminals, whose offenses have no particular geographical localization and who will be punished by joint decision of the governments of the Allies.

strikes "had neutralized Rabaul but had not prevented the Japanese from syphoning in reinforcements."

The extent to which the enemy's air potential around Rabaul was neutralized was borne out by failure of the Japanese air force to hit the Allied convoys moving northwestward through narrow waters Sunday night. Neither did the enemy airforce impede American troops swarming from landing craft on the beaches at Empress Augusta Bay early yesterday morning.

Bougainville is second only to New Britain as a strongly occupied island in the area northeast of Australia.

General MacArthur, in voicing his challenge to the enemy fleet added "we will throw everything we have including all my heavy bombers against the Japanese if they try to challenge us."

The Japanese already have reason to know what that means. On October 12, MacArthur threw the bulk of his bombers in a tremendous assault on Rabaul during which more than 350 tons of bombs rocked its network of fields, 177 enemy planes were destroyed or badly damaged and three warships sunk in the harbor.

Prepare for Sea Fight

Preliminary reports from Admiral Halsey's Headquarters did not refer to any enemy naval challenge but Army and Navy leaders directing the sweeping flanking move were prepared for a possible Japanese naval thrust in waters northwest of Bougainville.

The Bougainville invasion followed preliminary—perhaps diversionary—landings last Wednesday on the two tiny islands of the Treasury group 30 miles south of Bougainville and seaborne American paratroops landings on Choiseul, to the southeast, Thursday.

After his strategy conferences, General MacArthur said on the eve of the Bougainville invasion, "If my luck and weather are right, Halsey should be able to land without serious losses."

He explained that the bypassing move, in addition to cutting enemy supply and communication lines in the sector, would afford the Allies airfield from which fighters could provide cover for bombers raiding Rabaul from the south central Solomons.

"The Jap has been badly beaten and is beginning to lose some of his cocksureness," the general said, but he quickly added:

"The Jap is tough in body, tough in soul.

"Where will we strike next? I'll tell you about that another time."

Whereupon he strode from the conference room.

American and New Zealand troops which invaded Treasury, captured Jap mortar guns as they pinned the enemy against the north coast, it was announced today.

The seaborne paratroops which landed on southwestern Choiseul also are advancing.

The Bougainville operation was planned at conferences of General MacArthur, Admiral Halsey and other officers.

Lieut.-Gen. Millard Harmon, commanding general in the South Pacific and Maj.-Gen. Alexander A. Vandegrift, who led the invasion of the Solomons at Guadalcanal on August 7, also took part. Vandegrift only recently returned to the South Pacific to lead the Marine forces.

In announcing the landing, headquarters said:

"We are now in the rear of the enemy's position at Buin (southern Bougainville) and in the shortlands (15 miles south of Bougainville) and are athwart his line of supply to that area."

sians went on to crack the old Tartar wall fortifications and took Armyanski Bazar, 5 miles to the south.

This rapid investment was one of Russia's greatest accomplishments of the war and put the Red army in a reversal of the bloody role played out on the 4-mile-wide Perekop Isthmus in September, 1941, when the Germans captured it by frontal assault.

"Hastily retreating under the blows of our forces the enemy is sustaining huge losses in manpower and equipment," Moscow announced. During October 31 and November 1 alone our troops have taken prisoner over 6000 enemy officers and men."

Sixty more villages on the Nogaisk Steppe were taken as the Russians cut the enemy's Perekop-Kherson road and rail links to the Crimea.

The Russians still were 10 miles from the Crimea proper in their attack across the Perekop Isthmus, whose Russian-built defenses were termed by Berlin "one of the war's toughest assignments" when German troops cracked them in 1941.

On the other side of the peninsula the Red army was 15 miles away after advancing from Novo-Aleksyevka to take Salkovo, another point on the Melitopol-Dzhankoi Railway at the edge of the Sivash Sea causeway leading into the Crimea.

The German's only hope of escape now is by sea and air, and Moscow dispatches said the Soviet Black Sea fleet and Red air force were ready to smash any such attempts.

Russian reconquest of the peninsula would again put the Soviet fleet in control of the Black Sea, and give Red airmen valuable bases for attacks on Axis bases in the Odessa area, and in Rumania.

The Germans acknowledged a breakthrough on the Nagaisk steppes, but only indirectly disclosed the immensity of it by saying that "the gateway to the Crimea is still in German hands."

Above the Crimea the Russians reached the edge of the lower Dnieper River between Kakhovka and Nikopol at a point 70 miles west of Melitopol with the capture of Zapadnye-Kairy.

In three days 410 towns have been swept up. From them, the Germans fled in disorder over roads choked with wrecked and abandoned equipment, and their own dead.

Allies Sign Moscow Compact

The Moscow Conference exploded the hopes of the Germans—and the fears of some on the Allied side—that Russia would make a separate peace.

On top of this, President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin joined in a solemn warning that Germans—officers and men and Nazi Party members—who have committed atrocities will be taken back to the countries they outraged and there tried and punished for their "abominable crimes."

The United States, Britain and Russia agreed to set up in London a European Advisory Commission. The commission will study European questions as they come up during the war, and make joint recommendations to the three governments.

Men here who had a hand in the peace-making after the last war said that this machinery in London, which may be matched with similar machinery in the Far East, will correct one of the great weaknesses of President Wilson's time. Then the Armistice of November 11, 1918, caught the Allies wholly unprepared.

The Moscow conference also agreed to establish an advisory council for matters relating to Italy, and on this the French Committee of National Liberation will be represented, as well as this country, Britain and Russia.

Provision also was made for the addition to this council of representatives of Greece and Yugoslavia in view of Italy's aggressions against them. This indicated a desire on the part of the powers to give the little countries a greater voice in future deliberations. It may also mean an invasion of the Balkans.

The Moscow agreement embodied no plan for dealing with a defeated Germany. The communique, however, carried this significant statement:

"In an atmosphere of mutual confidence and understanding which characterized all the work of the conference, consideration was also given to other important questions. These included not only questions of a current nature but also questions concerning treatment of Hitlerite Germany and its satellites, economic cooperation and assurance of general peace."

The question of a meeting between President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin was left hanging fire. Some felt that the meeting of Foreign Ministers had been so sweeping, so specific, that there would be no need of a meeting of the Big Three. On the record, however, was Prime Minister Churchill's statement that he and President Roosevelt hoped to meet with Premier Stalin before the new year and were willing to take "immense journeys" 'to realize that hope.

The actual results of the Moscow Conference, which President Roosevelt announced Friday had been a tremendous success, were embodied in five documents. These were given out at 10 a. m. (for 1 p. m. release) under the direction of Undersecretary of State Edward Stettinius.

"The American people," Stettinius told newspapermen, "owe a debt of gratitude to Secretary Hull for his magnificent contribution to the success of the Moscow Conference."

The five documents were (1) the joint Four-Nation Declaration in which America, Britain, Russia and China agreed to crush their "respective" enemies and then join in a "general international organization" to maintain peace; (2) a communique describing the overall accomplishments of the conference; (3) the declaration for a free and independent Austria; (4) the declaration for a more liberal government in Italy, and (5) the Roosevelt-Churchill-Stalin statement on the punishment of Germans for atrocities.

Document No. 2, the joint communique, indicated that the controversy over a "second front" was dead. It told of frank and exhaustive discussions of measures to be taken to "shorten the war" against Germany and her satellites.

Siginificantly, it then told how the representatives of the American, British and Russian chiefs of staff, meeting in Moscow, had discussed military operations on which decisions "had been taken" and other military operations which are "being prepared," presumably the mass invasions of western Europe which Churchill has said are coming.

The American, British and Russian military men, the communique said, sought to "create a basis for the closest military cooperation in the future between the three countries."

This must have caused deep satisfaction in the Pentagon Building. Heretofore, American and British military leaders have never known very much about Russia's military plans; the big Red army offensive that is now under way was a surprise to them.

Peace Terms of Moscow Conference Win Strong Approval in Senate

Privately, many of the "B-2 H-2" group said they would vote for an amendment giving formal Senate backing to the Moscow language provided it was offered by "someone else," but intended to push their own fight for a strong Senate stand to the finish.

Lucas indicated he would move the agreement as a substitute "if no one else does," but said he thought it should be submitted by a Foreign Relations committeeman.

The understanding swiftly reached by Secretary of State Hull with the foreign ministers of Britain, Russia and China meanwhile injected new life in flagging Senate debate and apparently cut into the big majority for the Connally compromise.

Lucas told newsmen he thought the proposed declaration lagged so far behind the Allied understanding that it would be "a hollow gesture" to adopt it. "B-2 H-2" Senators added Lucas' name to their growing list.

Hill Hits Compromise

In a speech urging Senate approval of the Ball-Burton-Hatch-Hill plan to commit the Senate to an international organization of nations to keep the peace by military force if necessary, Senate Majority Whip Lister Hill charged approval of the Connally compromise would "lag behind, weaken and impair" the effects of the Moscow conference.

Under questioning by Senator Carl Hatch (Democrat) of New Mexico, Hill said the conference itself would be "defeated" by such action.

"It would indeed have the effect of repudiating the conference, and I think it would be so interpreted by every other nation," said Hill.

No sooner had the Senate convened than Senator Claude Pepper (Democrat) of Florida suggested that the Senate return the bill to committee for amendments more in line with the four-power action, but Chairman Connally objected.

The Foreign Relations chairman later warmly praised Hull for his "monumental accomplishment" in Moscow, but denied there is any "difference in principle" in the proposed Senate declaration and the Moscow statement. He said terms of the Senate resolution were cabled to Hull in advance of the four-power action.

As the postwar debate entered its second week, Connally made his second effort to limit speeches to 15 minutes on the resolution and each amendment. Senator Joseph H. Ball (Republican) of Minnesota, a leader of the move for a stronger declaration, blocked the move because only 12 Senators were present, and he said some of the absentees might wish to speak longer. Connally said he will renew his request tomorrow.

A new amendment sent to the Senate desk yesterday by Senator Edwin C. Johnson (Democrat) of Colorado and four other amendments still pending threatened to extend the debate deep into the week.

Plan for Control of Germany

Johnson proposed that "as a basis for negotiation" a disarmed Germany be placed under joint military control of Britain and Russia after the war, and that a whipped Japan be militarily controlled by the United States and China.

Johnson further proposed prewar territorial integrity for Finland, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, Hungary and Czechoslovakia; immediate freedom for Korea and the Philippines; dominion status for India; withdrawal of all nations from occupied Chinese territory, and restoration of Manchuria and Manchukuo to China, and "that Palestine be established as a refuge for such homeless and stateless Jews of the world who desire to go there."

First record Senate vote will come on an amendment proposed earlier by Senator John A. Danaher (Republican) of Connecticut, explicitly defining 20 terms in the Connally resolution and including the Atlantic Charter in a definition of "peace."

From Senators on and off the floor meanwhile came an accolade of favorable comment on the Moscow agreement. Senators differed only over "credit" and what line of peace planning the epochal pact resembled.

"Like Mackinac"—Taft

While Foreign Relations committeemen called it "confirmation of their own compromise," and "B-2 H-2ers" likened it to their strengthening amendment, Senator Robert A. Taft (Republican) of Ohio, went outside the Senate for a parallel. "It seems to me the Moscow agreement is far more like the Mackinac declaration of the Republican party," said Taft.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican) of Michigan termed the accord "splendid" and even Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana agreed "it should dispel the fear in England and the United States that Russia will now entertain a separate peace."

The 14 original sponsors of the Ball-Burton-Hatch-Hill amendment signed a statement terming the agreement "a great beacon of hope for a war-worry world" and Connally signed another calling the accord a "splendid guide for our comrades in arms and our associates in the peace."

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming called it "recognition of the sovereign equality of all peace-loving states," and Senator Hill: "A notable achievement."

But Wheeler noted that "no mention was made of the Atlantic Charter" and Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat) of North Carolina said the accord should have included guarantees of the integrity "of all subjugated nations."

War Sidelights

U-Boats Sank 39 Vessels, Nazis Claim

London, Nov. 1 (AP).—German U-boats sank 39 merchant ships totaling 255,700 tons in October, the Berlin radio said today.

The high command said the German navy and the air force sank 52 merchantmen totaling 301,700 gross registered tons, while 18 merchant vessels totaling more than 100,000 tons were so heavily damaged that "total loss of most of these ships may be assumed."

The communique said 27 more merchant ships totaling approximately 170,000 tons were damaged.

It claimed the German navy and the Luftwaffe sank one cruiser, 11 destroyers, two escort vessels and four motor torpedo boats and "five cruisers, seven destroyers and numerous other enemy naval units were so heavily damaged that destruction of part of these ships may be taken for granted."

112 Nazis Die in Plane

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Nov. 1 (AP).—The wreckage of three six-motored Merseburg-323 transport planes, in one of which 112 German soldiers apparently perished, has been found near Bastia Airfield in Corsica, as well as many JU-52 troop carriers blown up by the Germans because escape appeared impossible.

Naples Lighted, No Bombs

Naples, Nov. 1 (AP).—Electric current switches were thrown in one section of Naples today, and jittery residents were greatly relieved when the lights went on and nothing else happened.

A thorough search had been made of the zone for mines the Germans might have left wired to explode when the current was restored, and residents were warned so the fearful ones might evacuate their homes. Other sections of the city will be searched thoroughly, zone by zone, before electric power is restored.

Enemies Fraternize

Port Bou, Spain, Nov. 1 (AP).—A division of Austrian Alpinists ordered to drive about 10,000 of Premier Marshal Badoglio's Italian troops from the French Maritime Alps fraternized with them instead and even supplied them munitions, a border dispatch said today.

The Austrians were withdrawn from the region, between Nice and Menton, and replaced by an S. S. Division and a regiment of Nazi Mountaineers.

Recruiting Ban Irks Women's Service Units

By not being able to recruit in the Nation's critical labor shortage areas—now numbering 77 and including the District of Columbia—the women's military services feel their programs are being hampered without justification, The Post learned last night.

All the services — WACS, WAVES, SPARS and Women Marines—are in need of recruits to fill quotas set for them on a basis of the number of servicemen they can release to the fighting fronts.

The War Manpower Commission has ruled they cannot actively recruit by word of mouth, advertisement, radio or any other device in the shortage regions—but the women think their services might appeal to many girls who have no desire to take other war jobs and to women "who are sitting at home idle."

In some instances they are continuing to recruit, despite WMC objections, but in other instances large recruiting campaigns have been ordered discontinued by WMC officials.

In England, where women are drafted, the military services have all along had a No. 1 place. If a girl wants to join the ATS in preference to a war plant, for instance, she can do so.

As the critical labor shortage areas grow more numerous, the WACS, WAVES, SPARS, and Women Marines wonder what they are to do. WMC has said 112 other areas would be declared "critical—keep out" within the next six months. Six areas were added to the list yesterday.

With no Selective Service Act to aid them and WMC "unfriendly," they feel frustrated—and more than a little peeved.

District in Lead

WAC recruiting in the District leads all the States, local officers announced yesterday. As of November 1, the local office has signed up 40 per cent of its quota in the national campaign. The quota is 350 by December 7.

"We have sent 139 WACS to camp and have 50 more ready to go," Lieut. Helen K. Cooper reported from recruiting headquarters at 1400 Pennsylvania ave. nw.

In addition, she said 26 other women have passed the mental test and await physical examination.

RAF, Nazi Planes Swap Raid Blows

London, Nov. 1 (AP).—Low-flying RAF fighters swept across the Straits of Dover in bad weather late today to rake the French coast around Calais, and eight German planes paid a return visit, dropping a few bombs on widely separated places. Two raiders were destroyed.

Industry Registers Gain of 600 Over September's Figures

Aircraft production in October exceeded all expectations, passing the 8200 mark, an authorized spokesman revealed yesterday.

The record contrasted sharply with the disappointing performance in September when 7598 planes were produced—14 less than August.

During October, planes were produced at an annual rate of almost 100,000.

The more than 600-plane gain over September placed the plane program within striking distance of the year-end goal of 10,000 planes a month, although officials cautioned against too optimistic predictions about the remainder of the year, fearful of a possible additional production "plateau."

Heavy bomber production was excellent, an informed official said, resulting in a substantial gain in the total weight produced, running ahead of the gain in numbers produced.

Officials said that sharp improvements were made in all categories and in all areas, but said they were particularly pleased with the performance of West Coast plants which had seemed mired on a permanent "plateau."

To tonic West Coast production, the War Manpower Commission and War Production Board, at the direction of War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes, have inposed far-reaching production and manpower controls on the area.

Induction Calls To Be Suspended On 3 Holidays

No draft registrants will be ordered up for induction on Thanksgiving Day, the War Department said yesterday.

Further, men already inducted who are home on furlough and normally would have been ordered to reception centers on this day, November 25, will have the furlough extended by a day or two to allow them to spend the holiday with their families.

The same action will be taken at Christmas and New Year, when there will be suspensions for December 24, 25 and 26 and January 1.

Tax Expert Paul Says He's Not Going to Quit

By the Associated Press

Randolph Paul, the Treasury's general counsel, advised Secretary Morgenthau yesterday that he has no intentions of resigning, a Treasury official reported.

Mongenthau, just returned from a three weeks' tour of Mediterranean battle fronts, called in Paul as the result of published reports that the department's tax expert might quit because of the cold reception the Administration's tax program received on Capitol Hill.

Nazis Open Drive on Greeks In Civil Strife

Ankara, Turkey, Nov. 1 (AP).—Already confronted by chaotic guerilla warfare in Yugoslavia, the Germans have opened a full-fledged offensive against 50,000 Greeks banded in disputing camps. The Germans obviously are seeking to take advantage of patriot dissension and put down armed resistance before it gets out of hand.

The German campaign is directed against the Elas group of patriots of Colonel Seraenhis in Thessaly, and the rival Edes army of Colonel Zervas in Epirus.

The real root of their conflict is apparently a disagreement over whether King George II should be allowed to return to his throne. The Elas, estimated at about 30,000 fighters, oppose the King's return, unless he returns immediately, joins them in their mountain hideouts and personally leads the resistance movement. The Elas reportedly tend to be Communists.

The Edes, numbering about 20,000, are purely a military outfit, unquestioningly following the orders and directives of Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Allied Middle East commander at Cairo.

(Meanwhile, a wild and fraticidal struggle continued in Yugoslavia, according to a communique issued by the Partisans of Josip Broz—Drug Tito—which reported a new outbreak along the Serbian-Bosnian border between the Partisans, who wear red stars, and the Chetniks of Yugoslav War Minister Gen. Draja Mihailovic combined with the puppet troops of Field Marshal Filan Nedic.

(Meavy German infantry attacks near Kolasin and Berani near the Albanian boarder, and to the north in Croatia and Slovenia, were announced.

(The Yugoslav government in Cairo said the Partisans had killed one of General Mihailovic's foremost field commanders, Gen. Milo Djukanovic, who participated in the anti-Hitler coup d'etat of March, 1941, and had been serving as the Chetnik governor of Montenegro.

(Mihailovic's men, the governmen said, were attacking the Bulgarian garrison at Svrljig near the Bulgarian border and the Bulgarians, in retaliation, burned 24 villages in the Pirot Pass.)

Chinese Check New Jap Drive, But Hunan Fighting Continues

Chunking, Nov. 1 (AP).—Japanese attempting a new two-pronged drive from above Lake Tungting on Hunan Province's "rice bowl," have been checked but fierce fighting still is raging, the Chinese command announced tonight.

Japanese attempts to drive down Lake Tungting into the rich farming belt toward Changsha were thrown back with heavy enemy losses last May.

Today's communique gave the first details of the battles of Siaofeng, in northwest Chekiang on China's eastern front. It said the Japanese left 1300 dead, including the colonel commanding the Siaofeng sector, on the battlefield, when they retreated Thursday, but had begun a counter-attack Friday after receiving reinforcements and air support.

"Fighting is still proceeding in the outskirts of Siaofeng," the announcement said, announcing an unchanged situation on the Yunnan-Burma border front, where other enemy forces are attempting to seal off Salween River crossings against any possible supply movement to China through Burma. Allied planes from India kept up their relentless pounding of Japanese supply and communication centers in Burma over the weekend.

Abdication Put Up to King By Badoglio

Somewhere in Southern Italy, Nov. 1 (AP).—Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio told aged King Vittorio Emanuel today he could not form a representative government while the King remained in power.

Thus Badoglio, just returned from Naples, where he conferred with political leaders, handed the King his toughest problem in the 43 years of his reign—whether to abdicate or allow Italy to tear herself apart by political strife.

In Naples, Badoglio had conferred with Count Carlo Sforza, Benedetto Croce, the Italian philosopher, and others.

Anti-Fascist Sforza is said to have told Badoglio he never would join the government so long as the King retained the throne. He was reported backed by Croce and the entire National Liberation Front, which includes Italy's six political parties.

While the National Liberation Front prefers a republic, Sforza and other leaders let it be known that they would not oppose a regency for the Prince of Naples—the 6-year-old son of Crown Prince Umberto.

They told Badoglio, however, the regent would have to be selected with care, and that they would decline flatly to consider Umberto or the Duke of Aosta.

made big steps toward winning the peace and he thinks the United States and Russia are better friends because of this conference than they could have been without it.

He has been deeply impressed by the Soviets and they have been impressed by him.

Someone asked Hull what he thought of Stalin.

The Secretary closed his eyes, waved his long hand in the air, and said he thought Stalin was a very remarkable person, a man of unusual ability, fine judgment and had a broad practical grasp of the subjects which come to his attention. He added that Stalin was one of the three leaders today who have a responsibility such as no other three people will have for perhaps another five centuries.

War Trials to Avenge Nazi Victims

prosecuting and punishing those of its citizens responsible for the war and for atrocities. Few were ever brought to trial, and of the sentences handed down, even fewer were carried out in full.

This time, the Allies make it clear that those who suffered shall sit in judgment over their oppressors.

Also, the solution forestalls any fears on the part of Russia and the conquered nations that "American soft-heartedness" will tone down the verdicts.

The declaration provides that each country will compile a list of invaders who inflicted cruelties upon its people and when hostilities end will deal with the Nazi "supermen" according to its own laws.

U. S. Role to Be Minor

Thus, the United States will probably have no part in punishing the rank and file of German war criminals.

As for Hitler and his immediate underlings, the declaration states that those "whose offenses have no particular geographical localization . . . will be punished by joint decision of the governments of the Allies."

The Soviet Union has already begun tabulating the names of Germans who must pay for their illegal deeds, it was announced recently in an embassy information bulletin.

A profound psychological effect on Germans was foreseen here since it is well known that the Poles, Czechs, Greeks, Yugoslavs and other invaded peoples are determined to have full revenge.

open.

At about 5 o'colck one of our outposts reported he'd spotted some Germans, apparently setting up a heavy machine-gun, 30 or 40 feet from his foxhole. Major Dudley decided we should pull out and move to another place and wait a little longer for more of our outfit to join up with us.

My little bunch of men covered the withdrawal, but there was no contact with the enemy. After about two hours of walking we were passing a house when an Italian came out and started parleying with Pfc. Jack Alongi of Detroit, who speaks the lingo, and the Italian said he could guide us to a place where we'd be safe and could operate. He led us about 10 or 11 kilometers to a heavily wooded mountainside where a little stream trickled cool water and where the cover was so thick there was little likelihood the enemy could spot us with aerial observation.

Rested One Whole Day

We sank down there and rested one whole day. The men were tired and hungry. We had only about three days' food K and C rations, because we had left behind the parabundle full of food—it was too heavy to carry. The Italians brought us bread and cheese again, but in small amounts; by the time you divided it, each man had a piece about as big as a thimble.

The Italians brought us news, too—usually good news about the Americans advancing—but they couldn't agree on their stories. Some said the Americans were in this town or that, or this or that many kilometers away; and then they would get into arguments amongst themselves about just what the situation was.

The Italians also brought us notes, from other paratroopers who wanted to find us and join forces, and Major Dudley would in such cases send back a note with the Italian, saying something like "the bearer is to be trusted. He will bring you to my area." That way we added a few more men to our outfit.

The major found an Italian who offered to guide us to a bridge where there was a lot of enemy traffic—where we might do a lot of damage and hold up their communications by a little demolition. We had about 25 pounds of T. N. T., and the major decided we should go after the bridge.

Reconnaissance Begun

Major Dudley went out on a reconnaissance with the Italian, to take a look at the bridge. Three others went along: Captain Tomasik, Sergt. Joseph L. Buchanan of Rayville, Tex., and Alongi. They went out and reached a spot where they could look down on the town of Montello, which was near the bridge; from there they could see the draw leading to the bridge, and the German traffic on the road.

That evening we got ready for the job. My men were tired—my outfit had brought up the rear in the march to the new area and arrived last—but when the major asked if they wanted to go along on the trip to the bridge they volunteered in a group.

So we waited for the moon to come up, until about 10:30. Even then it was so dark in the heavy cover of the mountains that some of the men held hands to avoid getting lost.

The Italian had said he could lead us to the bridge in an hour, but that was a slight underestimate. He kept getting lost himself, and then he would stop us and go ahead and look for the right path and come back, and once we reversed our direction completely. The trip took us four hours instead of one.

It Was a Bridge, Anyway

The Italian had said he would give us warning before we reached the vicinity of the bridge, so we could size up the situation and get everything set. But actually he led us right smack up to the bridge; we burst out above it without any warning. And it was the wrong bridge. But it was a bridge, on the main German artery, anyhow. And we had a beautiful field of fire, looking right down on the highway.

We saw several vehicles go by; trucks. And then an armored car came down, went to the center of the bridge and halted.

Evidently there were sentries on the bridge, in a little house at one end of it. We were close enough so we could hear the armored car driver talking with some others on the bridge. On of my men who speaks German said the driver called out: "You stay here: I'm going up the hill."

Then the armored car pulled off the bridge. But it didn't go up the hill. We could see it parked at the side of the road, under some trees.

"Go Down and Have a Look"

The major came down to the point to ask why we hadn't gone on right down to the bridge, and I told him about the armored car. He told us to go down and have a look, so Jeanes and I sneaked right down to the house. We could see the car—it was a half-track vehicle—pulled up under the tree in the moonlight. There was no one in it. The crew had evidently gone into the house.

We started up the hill again, and by this time our feet were really shot. Every step was a painful effort. We'd chopped our feet down into the toes of our shoes so much coming down hillsides that they were raw.

We had to cross a patch where there was no vegetation to get back to the rest of the people on the hillside. We reached that and were just sneaking across it in the bright moonlight, when we heard two motorcycles coming down the road. We froze right where we were; and our hearts did too. But the riders didn't see us. They passed right over the bridge and the sound of their motors disappeared.

Then we heard the armored car start up and move out. We decided then that the coast was clear. We would take our chances with the men in the house—if there were any left. We contacted a runner from the major and told him we were all set to go. Jeanes still carried his pack full of T. N. T. He'd been lugging that bundle ever since we jumped. Now at last we had a chance to use it.

Berlin Sees Concessions Given Stalin

London, Nov. 1 (AP).—The first German reaction to the conference in Moscow was a declaration broadcast tonight that the United States and Britain had made basic concessions to the "dictator of the Kremlin" to act according to Premier Joseph Stalin's wishes wherever Russia is concerned.

Dr. Siegfriend Horn, of the Nazi News Agency DNB, said.

"According to the opinion in Berlin, nothing more or less than a basic concession was made to the dictator of the Kremlin to act according to his wishes wherever in his opinion Russia's interests demand a helping hand.

"Military questions were in the forefront of the negotiations, but nothing precise has been published about the intentions of the Allies in this field.

"The so-called political questions are obscured in the communique by a flood of phrases concerning the postwar policy, recalling the League of Nations idea of unhappy memory.

"From the completely negative treatment of these problems, which are of the most urgent interest to the people of Europe, German political circles conclude the Stalin refused any discussion of questions which he regards as touching his sphere of interest and that his partners agreed to postpone the discussion of these questions to a more favorable moment."

(Dr. Paul Schmidt, German foreign office spokesman, told a press conference that the tripartite meeting meant "a formal signing and confirming of Europe's surrender to Moscow by the Anglo-Saxon powers," the OWI reported.)

London Acclaims Pact

London, Nov. 1 (AP).—The war and postwar vows of the United States, Britain, Russia and China, as set forth by the Moscow conference, won general acclaim here tonight—but raised a few complicated questions and much speculation.

Even representatives of Poland, the only regugee government not having diplomatic relations with Russia, expressed satisfaction with the declarations of the parley announced today, although such matters as Polish-Russian relations and Polish postwar boundaries were not mentioned.

Reservations were expressed by both Poles and Frechmen on the proposed European Advisory Commission, on which no provision has been made for Polish and French representation, although it may handle issues which they regard as their special interests.

But for the most part, representatives of European Governments in exile were heartened by the diplomatic prospect of a partnership for small nations in allied peace-making, interpreting the communique to mean that the great powers had agreed not to dictate to the smaller countries.

A spokesman close to the Yugoslav Government, which also operates in Cairo, hailed the declaration as another step justifying "our confidence in our Allies."

Roosevelt Seizes Mines, Orders Strikers to Return to Jobs Tomorrow

months ago at the time of the first general coal strike this year—on May 1. It was understood that the Secretary of Interior indicated that he did not want the job again without power to make a wage agreement.

The President moved swiftly after the United Mine Worers' Policy Committee failed to take a stand on the WLB's Illinois decision at a 3 p. m. meeting. The Chief Executive Friday promised "decisive action" in the event the miners refused to return to work under the board's terms, but withheld any move to give the policy group a chance to act.

Originally scheduled for 11 a. m., the UMW meeting was postponed because of "transportation difficulties," a union spokesman said. The meeting adjourned at 4:30 p. m., after instructing a twenty-eight man sub-committee of union district presidents to study the situation and report back at 4 p. m. today.

Administration officials were undecided on whether Lewis put the session over until today to secure more time, or whether he was deliberately delaying to force the President's hand, but mine seizure was finally decided upon to avoid any additional loss of coal.

Ickes began turning the mines back to their owners last August and completed the job October 12. The following day, strikes started in Alabama, spreading to other States and reaching general strike proportions Sunday midnight with the expiration of the "truce" with the Government set by Lewis at the end of the third stoppage last June.

Stoppage Spreads to Canada

Except for a handful of non-union mines, and a portion of those in Illinois controlled by the AFL Progressive Mine Workers, practically no coal was mined yesterday. The stoppage even spread to some mines in Western Canada.

In ending the strike last June, Lewis stated that the miners were willing to work for the Government, but not for the operators, until October 31. It was believed that he might seize upon the resumption of Government operation as a means of ordering the miners back to work, although there were indications that some miners might refuse to return until a new contract is signed.

Ickes was authorized to call upon Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson to provide protection for workers desiring to return to their jobs. Similar authority was granted the first time the mines were seized, but it was later Ickes' boast that he found it unnecessary to use it.

Except for the clause relating to signing a contract, the executive order issued last night was virtually identical with the May 1 order.

The order also specified that the WLB's compliance powers were to remain in effect, thus permitting the Government to withhold the dues checkoff and other benefits from the union and to cancel strikers' draft deferments.

WLB's Illinois soft coal decision rejected a proposed contract between Illinois operators and miners providing $8.50 for an 8½-hour "portal to portal" day including underground travel time. WLB said that only $8.12½ a day was warranted under the stabilization program and offered to approve a contract providing for that amount of compensation.

One question left unsettled by the decision was whether the same amount—$8.12½—could be approved for other coal-producing areas. Some coal operators contend that under the WLB's formula, the amount would have to be reduced substantially in the Appalachian area which produces more than 60 per cent of the country's coal.

Also up for acceptance or rejection is the WLB's anthracite decision, providing a 32.2 cents wage increase to hard coal miners under the "Little Steel" formula, but taking no stand on the portal-to-portal controversy.

UMW Journal Conciliatory

Earlier, the United Mine Workers Journal went to press carrying editorials and articles attacking the Illinois decision, but leaving a "way out" to permit the miners to return to work with some grace.

"American coal miners do not want to deny the Nation the coal supply it needs," said the Journal.

"'In the scheme of things, coal miners have been abused, unjustly denied their honest due and pushed about by the powers that be," the paper continued. "Profit dollars have been given preferential treatment over coal miners' living needs. They resent such treatment, but will do their part. They will carry on.

"They insist, however, upon fixing the responsibility for such treatment and for the conditions forced upon them. They reserve the right to continue to press their inherent right to a square deal."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

GRAVE DOUBT HAS arisen in the minds of senatorial colleagues as to whether their vivacious friend Robert Rice Reynolds of North Carolina, chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, plans to run for reelection.

They base this partly on the strange fact that the Senator did not go back to his native State during the summer recess. Also they figure perhaps the ebullient Robert, who, even his enemies admit, has a generous helping of political shrewdness, realizes that with new wealth and a new wife, the reelection battle would be too uphill even to try.

"Our Bob," whose first business enterprise was running a skating rink where Huey Long sold swamp root, now is seen in very select society. Also he is more dignified and paternal.

All this indicates the influence of his new 20-year-old bride, Evalyn McLean, heiress to the McLean fortune, whose father was one of Harding's intimates and whose mother once intrigued Washington with her book "Father Struck It Rich," telling how her Irish immigrant parent struck gold in Colorado.

Evie and Bob now have a 1100-acre farm in Maryland and a winter place at Palm Beach, where they purchased the former home of Mrs. William Randolph Hearst.

Undoubtedly the Senator recalls how he defeated Senator Cameron Morrison, also blessed with a wealthy wife. Reynolds told North Carolinians all about the swank dinner parties given by Senator Morrison, reciting items on the menu, with special emphasis on caviar.

"And do you know what caviar is, my friends?" he would shout. "Caviar is fish eggs! Fish eggs! Are you going to send back to the Senate a man who eats fish eggs?"

Today, it is Senator Reynolds who is eating fish eggs, and he knows that his primary opponent, former Governor Clyde Hoey, is sure to let the folks back home know about it.

Age Vs. Nonsense

Towering, 66-year-old Senator Tom Connally of Texas is touchy about his age, doesn't list it in his Congressional Directory biography and doesn't like pointed references to it by the Senate press gallery.

The other day the popular Texan braced United Press Reporter John Cutter, who had written a story depicting the battle over the Texan's postwar foreign policy resolution as a "youth versus age" debate, which, in truth, it is.

Newshound Cutter reported that the drive to put some teeth into the resolution was led by younger members of the Senate—Pepper of Florida, 43; Ball of Minnesota, 39; Bridges of New Hampshire, 45, and others—while older Senators, including Connally, were demanding that the compromising resolution be enacted without change.

Connally was furious about being classed with the rocking-chair fraternity.

"You've interviewed me a lot," he told Cutter angrily. "Now I want to interview you. Did you write that story about youth versus age?"

"Yes, sir, I did," was the reply.

"Well, you didn't state the issue correctly," protested the Texan, grasping the reporter's coat lapels. "The real issue in this dispute is one of good judgment against a lot of nonsense."

Wheat Uncertainties

THOUGH NO announcement has been made, inside word in the Agriculture Department is that wheat farmers will get a loan price of 90 per cent of parity, which is a 5 per cent increase over this year.

Officials recognize that something attractive must be done to increase wheat plantings. As it looks now, plantings are going to fall below the high goals set by the Government—an acreage increase of 14 million over this year.

This year farmers had the 85-per-cent-of-parity loan, which acted to support the price, plus both parity payments and conservation payments. But Congress has knocked out parity payments for next year, leaving a margin of uncertainty as to whether wheat will bring as much as flax or grain sorghums, or some other crop.

Planting is now well along in the winter wheat belt, but it is reported to be a slack planting. Never has there been so much demand by farmers to know what the price is going to be. And the official answer is still withheld.

And when the announcement is made it will be a loan figure of 90 per cent of parity, whereas farmers would like to have 100 per cent, to make up for the loss of parity payments.

All this confusion comes at a time when there is a greater demand for wheat than this country has ever known. In addition to the tremendous demand for wheat for flour, 450 million bushels have been used for animal feed in the past 12 months, and still more will be needed for the same purpose in the next year. And beyond that, the Government has pledged another 50 million bushels for foreign relief.

All this explains why the gates are being opened again to imports of wheat and barley from Argentina, for the first time in quantity since the drought years.

James Baity, Assistant To Comptroller, Retires

James L. Baity, 73, assistant to the Comptroller General, retired yesterday, completing approximately 30 years of Government service. He and Mrs. Baity will continue to make their home at the Shoreham.

Baity came to Washington from St. Louis, Mo., in 1913 and on May 9 of that year joined the auditor's staff of the War Department by presidential appointment. He remained there until 1921 when the Comptroller General's office was established and he became assistant to the comptroller.

Eastman Condemns Freight Expediters

Joseph B. Eastman, director of the Office of Defense Transportation, yesterday condemned the activity of so-called "freight expediters," employed by many firms to get preferential movement of their shipments.

Declaring that "freight expediters cannot gain preference for their employers without imposing sacrifices on other shippers" and "the ultimate result is to slow down the movement of all freight," Eastman asked the railroads to report every instance of such activity to the ODT.

Women Viewed as Playing Major Role at Polls Today

By the Associated Press

Voters in seven States ballot today in off-year elections that will be studied closely for possible clews to 1944's political wars.

Women probably will have a major hand in the results. With many men voters in the armed services and others busy in war plants, housewives have the opportunity to get in the decisive licks.

In any event, the voting is expected to be lighter than it was in 1942 when the Republicans picked up 9 seats in the Senate, 45 in the House and added 3 governorships.

Headliner on today's card is the race for lieutenant governor in New York, where the rival candidates Lieut. Gen. William H. Haskell, retired, Democrat, and State Senator Joe R. Hanley, Republican, are backed by President Roosevelt on the one hand and by Wendell Willkie and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey on the other.

Other Election Battles

Vying for national interest is the gubernatorial fights in Kentucky, where Democrats are counting on turning in their usual heavy plurality; the election of a mayor in normally Republican Philadelphia, with President Roosevelt backing former Ambassador William C. Bullitt, Democratic candidate, and the gubernatorial race in New Jersey, where Republicans claim they will elect Walter E. Edge over Vincent J. Murphy, Democrat.

Of less national significance is the election in Mississippi, where voters will formally name Democratic candidates for governor and other State offices; the selection of State legislators in the Democratic stronghold of Virginia and the mayoralty fight in Detroit, which is being waged primarily on local issues stemming from recent race riots.

2 Special Elections

Sandwiched in with the regular voting are two special elections to fill congressional vacancies. Voters in Pennsylvania's 23rd District will choose a successor to Representative James E. Van Zandt, Altoona Republican who is now in the armed forces, and New York's 32nd District will pick a replacement for Representative Francis D. Culkin, Republican, who died.

Virtually on the eve of the election, President Roosevelt went to the support of Bullitt again by calling an attack on the former Ambassador "a mass of falsehoods." The President expressed his views in a letter to a Philadelphia newspaper, commenting on a pamphlet attributed to Republican sources, which criticized Bullitt's diplomatic activities abroad.

The President wrote:

"He attended the funeral of Marshal Pilsudski as representative of the United States. When you or I attend an official funeral we walk into the church in the procession with anybody we are told to walk with. It is not our choice—and this campaign pamphlet is a rather unintelligent attempt to imply an untruth." (Note: This refers to a picture of Bullitt taken as he walked with Herman Goering, printed in the pamphlet as "at a public function," without saying it was a state funeral.)

Pacific Exploits Win Air Medal For D. C. Airman

Strafing and bombing from "dangerously low" altitudes won the air medal for Capt. Joseph J. Berkow of Washington, a statement from Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific area reported yesterday.

Berkow, husband of Mrs. Lilly Berkow of 456 Delafield pl. nw. and son of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Berkow of 711 King st., Alexandria, was cited for participation in 25 operational flight missions, including escorting bombers and transport aircraft, interception and attack. His citation was one of 20 to men of the Fifth Air Force by Lieut. Gen. George C. Kenney, commander of Allied Air Forces in the Southwest Pacific area.

A flight engineer, Berkow, 24, is a graduate of Central High School. Formerly manager of the Alexandria Cleaners, he enlisted in September, 1941, and trained at Mitchel Field. He has a 16-month-old son, Sigmund Allan, whom he didn't see until a furlough eight months ago.

Roosevelt Says Subsidies Save Money for Public and U. S.

By Christine Sadler

President Roosevelt, in a 10,000-word message to Congress, yesterday defended subsidies to keep the cost of living under control, on the grounds that they save money for both consumers and the Government and are working successfully.

"This is no time to start wandering into an untried field of uncontrolled and uncontrollable prices and wages," he declared.

The smoothly worded draft, longest of his presidential career, reviewed the country's wartime food and price control programs and said Government plans for insuring farmers adequate price supports without passing the increased cost of producing food onto the consumer had three important advantages:

1. "They stimulate production of certain necessary and select crops."

2. "By preventing price increases, they eliminate inflationary tendencies."

3. "They encourage the distribution of food through normal legitimate channels. . . ."

Flames Are Fanned

First reactions in Congress indicated the message changed no votes immediately, but merely fanned into flame the smoldering antisubsidy fight which has hampered clear-cut food pricing for more than a year and was at a similar peak of dispute last June when the President vetoed a bill that would have prevented payment of food subsidies by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Senator Bankhead (Democrat) of Alabama, leader of antisubsidy forces in the Senate, declared: "The President's message points up the issue that Congress is going to have to decide—whether the Federal Government is going to subsidize consumers at the expense of the taxpayers at a time when consumers are able to pay adequate prices for food."

On the House side, first comment came from Representative Patman (Democrat) of Texas, an Administration supporter. "The President again has asked Congress for teamwork and unity in prosecuting this war and preventing inflation," he declared. "I hope there is a ready and quick response."

Patman is a member of the House Committee on Banking and Currency, which recently voted its disapproval of food subsidies by a majority larger than voted against the idea in June.

Two Acute Pressures

Two "acute pressures" on the food pricing front, the President said, are bread and milk—basic items in every family's diet and requiring "immediate action."

Adequate production of milk is seriously threatened, he declared, by an unfavorable margin between feed costs and dairy prices and the Government will have to continue "some form of equalization payment" for some time beyond the three-month subsidy announced by the War Food Administration to help dairymen pay their feed bills.

Anti-subsidy Congressmen, who argue the price of milk should be permitted to go up, were so aroused by the feed payment plan they wrote restrictive clauses in legislation now before them to eliminate it in December.

Flour Subsidy Indicated

Indicating the Administration's next subsidy will be on flour or wheat, the President said, "A program to prevent an increase in the price of bread is now being developed."

Other highlights in the Chief Executive's message included:

1. Announcement that the Government plans to purchase "or otherwise control" certain foods, "or absorb the transportation cost—in order to stretch consumption through the year, and to insure distribution that is fair to all parts of the country."

Some foods, notably peanuts and Irish potatoes, already are "controlled" by the Government but the President pointed out distribution of many foods, particularly nonrationed items, has been hampered by geography, transportation difficulties, and "excessive demand that has made it profitable to sell within the area in which the crops are grown rather than to ship to other markets."

"This makes it necessary," he declared, "for the Government to develop programs to insure orderly geographic distribution of all important foods. National interest requires that every part of the country obtain a fair share."

Not for Perishables

2. Rationing will be extended to other "important foods," the President indicated, but will not be tried out for perishables.

3. An increased amount of food must be sent abroad in 1944, he said, but civilians in this country are today better fed than ever before on the average and will continue to eat adequately.

"I am sure that the American people realize that every pound of food which we sent our fighting allies is helping our own soldiers in their battles and is speeding the day when all our fighting men and women will come home," he declared.

4. Farmers have increased food production during this war more than twice as much as they did during the same period of the last war—and have large 1944 increases ahead of them. Government funds will be needed to get the increased production, he said, but consumers should not have to bear the cost for this any more than they pay for additional war plants, he said.

5. Food subsidies this year will cost 800 million dollars, the President said, and have saved the Government billions of dollars in its own purchases of food and other war materials that would have advanced in price if foods had been permitted to go up.

Equal to Three Days of War

"I am sure that Congress and the people feel that this expenditure of 800 million dollars per year is a moderate sum to pay in order to help accomplish the objectives we have in mind—greater production and lower consumer prices—for a whole year. In fact, it is about equal to the cost to us of waging this war for three days," he said.

6. The average income per farmer since the outbreak of the war in 1939 has risen more than the average income of the other parts of the population, the President said, and the farmer today is better off than he was in 1910-1914—the base period on which parity farm prices are based—"and better off than he has been in any year since that time."

"In addition to favorable prices and incomes," the President said, "the farmer has been guaranteed Government support of the prices he receives for war crops, not only during the war, but for two years afterward—a guarantee against postwar disaster afforded to no other group."

He declared this favorable position of the farmer today "just and desirable" but said the two objectives of the food program—adequate production and equitable distribution at fair prices—"sometimes become inconsistent with each other."

"For example," he said, "one of the inducements for increased production of food by farmers is to see that they get an adequate price for their products. Such a price is necessary to get production. However, if these prices are too high the result will be that by the time the food reaches the grocery store or butcher shop, the housewife will have to pay too high a price for it.

"This in turn may force a rise in wages and an increase in the prices which farmers have to pay for what they buy. On the other hand, if the butcher shop or grocery store gets an insufficient price from the consumer for meat or groceries, then the farmer in turn will get too low a price to encourage him to raise as much food as we need.

"In both of these cases, our production and price objectives are not likely to be achieved unless the Government assists with equalization payments or other aid."

In pushing food production at home in 1944, he said, the blunders of World War I will not be repeated nor "dust bowl" conditions encouraged.

Supplementing planting at home, he pointed out, will be plans "already under way to increase our food supply by the development and procurement of food abroad."

The President attached to his message a complete schedule of payments undertaken by the Commodity Credit Corp. this year and pointed out some of the commodities with price supports—such as cotton, corn, wheat, tobacco and rice—have had Government aid for years.

In supporting food prices, he declared, "we are only applying here the same principle which has proved so effective in the production of other war materials—such as copper, lead, zinc, aluminum, and others."

Will of Lonergan's Wife Bequeaths Nothing to Him

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—The will of Patricia Burton Lonergan, pretty 22-year-old heires to a five million dollar brewery fortune, who was murdered October 24, was filed for probate today, and contained no mention of her husband, Wayne Lonergan, under indictment for her confessed slaying. She left her entire estate to her 18-months-old son, Wayne William Lonergan.

The court today appointed Edward V. Broderick, veteran trial attorney who said he had defended "36 or 37 men on murder charges and never had a client go to the electric chair," as chief counsel for Lonergan.

Lonergan last week said he lacked funds to retain counsel.

Destroyer Halved By Torpedo Made Whole Once More

Boston, Nov. 1 (AP).—An American destroyer split in two in the African campaign and repaired in what naval authorities described as "one of the most amazing epics of the war" is almost ready to go into battle again, Rear Admiral Robert A. Theobald, commandant of the First Naval District, said today.

The torpedoed vessel was taken into Casablanca Harbor after she had been hit, and repair crews, working with greatly limited facilities, removed an 80-foot section, "hitched" the vessel together and sent her back to this country under her own power.

In removing the 80-foot section, the repairman cut away the engineroom, one fireroom, two stacks and other equipment.

Nazis Prefer Jail To Snowy Liberty

Winnipeg, Nov. 1 (AP).—Nineteen Germans who engineered one of Canada's biggest prisoner-of-war breaks during a blizzard Sunday walked back into their forest camp today after spending the night in the timber under a heavy snowfall. "We got lost in the bush," one said.

The camp was opened recently for 400 prisoners to cut fuel wood for Manitoba cities and towns.

Major's Daughter Vanishes in N. Y.

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Police pressed an intensive search today for pretty, 14-year-old Margaret Moore, daughter of an Army major, who was last seen yesterday as two sailors approached her in Central Park. A companion said that when one of the sailors seized Margaret's arm, she fled.

The father, Major Moore, is an Army physician serving in the European war theater.

Draft Board Calls Strike Sit Down

Little Falls, Minn., Nov. 1 (AP).—The Morrison County Draft Board announced today it would refuse to process any more men for induction "until all strikes are settled for the duration."

"If a million men can go on strike, who is going to support the soldiers already in the armed forces? Why put more men into the service if we cannot take care of those already in," the board said in a letter to President Roosevelt and the Minnesota Senators.

School Strike in Omaha

Omaha, Nov. 1 (AP).—All but nine of Omaha's 60 public schools were closed today as approximately 150 of the 170 custodians struck to force a demand for wage increases.

"Naturally, I don't know when the war will end..."

"The sooner the better, is all I can say. But I know that until it ends, you and I have a duty to your car that gets more important every day...

"EVERY CAR that still runs is an essential cog in the country's whole transportation scheme. As the older cars quit, the ones still left get more and more essential.

"I'm not making scare-talk when I say that even standing in a garage most of the time, your car gets run down. Metals corrode. Oil gets dirty and sludgy. Grease dries out. The battery runs down. Spark plugs get fouled up. Radiator hose connections go bad. Tires get soft, so the sidewalls bend and crack.

"In these times, it's a crime to let this happen. Because you don't have to! Almost anyone's car can see him through, if he'll give it a chance.

"We're still here with everything it takes to help protect your car, whatever make it is. You find us short-handed sometimes, but we're long on experience and good equipment and reliable Esso products.

"However little you drive, you need winter oil and a winter grease job. Your battery fit and strong. Your radiator tight and ready with anti-freeze. Your tires checked over, maybe switched around to get the most out of them. This is mighty important right now—to keep your car in service for the duration. Come on in. Right this week. Winter's getting close!"

Carpenter, Here for Concert, Terms Music Mathematics

Music is the most interesting field of applied mathematics, Composer John Alden Carpenter said yesterday. He is a businessman as well as a writer of music.

In Washington to attend the world premiere of his dance suite by the National Symphony Orchestra tomorrow night at Constitution Hall, Carpenter said he has constantly stuck to the "romantic" school, even in the 1920's when all romance was decried as a bore.

The 67-year-old composer also told reporters that a short composition of his will be broadcast by the New York Symphony Orchestra on November 21. He wrote the piece in August in answer to a call by the League of Composers for five-minute pieces with reference to the war, he said.

Carpenter's new composition is called "The Anxious Bugler" and was inspired by a correspondence of the composer with a sailor in the Boston Merchant Marine School.

The concert tomorrow under the direction of Hans Kindler will include Shostakovich's Fifth Symphony, the overture to Mozart's Cosi fan Tutti, and Beethoven's Concerto No. 4 in G Major, played by the Polish pianist, Arthur Rubinstein.

Carpenter's daughter, Mrs. Patrick C. Hill, lives at 2303 Bancroft pl. nw.

Third of U. S. Gas Goes to Fighters, Ickes Discloses

One-third of all gasoline produced in the United States is now required for military use, the Petroleum Administrator for War, Harold L. Ickes, disclosed yesterday in announcing that more than 50 million gallons of petroleum products are going directly to the fighting forces daily.

"The facts which we can now make public show the terrific drain that war is imposing on our dwindling petroleum reserves," Ickes said.

"More than 30 per cent of all our gasoline must now go straight to power the expanding bomber attacks, expanding fighter missions, expanding air transport operations . . . and to fuel the thousands of tanks, jeeps, trucks and motorized artillery on literally hundreds of separate fighting fronts . . ." said Ickes.

Dr. Ethel Nixon Is Appointed to Welfare Board

Dr. Ethel L. Nixon was appointed a member of the Board of Public Welfare yesterday, replacing Mrs. Anita T. Anderson. Mrs. Anderson resigned in July to go to Catesville, Pa., where her husband had taken a wa remergency job.

A native Washingtonian, Dr. Nixon is a graduate of Dunbar High School, the College of Howard University, and the Howard Medical School.

She received her license to practice medicine from the National Board of Medical Examiners, making her eligible to practice in over 40 States, and is on the staff of Freedmens Hospital. She studied women's and children's diseases in New York hospitals.

Dr. Nixon is a member of the Phyllis Wheatley YWCA and a member of East Central Civic Association.

Board had listened to all parties and arrived at conclusions all parties could accept."

The new contract provisions settle all the disputed questions which have kept relations between management in a turmoil for more than a year. They were unanimously ordered by the War Labor Board upon recommendation of Moses Shapiro, referee in the case.

On the question of discharge of employes, once extremely difficult for management, WLB directed that management could suspend an employe, remove him from the plant, and that if a dispute arose, a hearing would be provided within 24 hours after the suspension between the plant shop committee and the management, and if agreement is not then reached, another hearing must be held within 48 hours between the Joint Shop Committee and management. If there is still no agreement, the matter proceeds to arbitration within five days.

Another important provision is establishment of arbitration machinery to handle grievances.

On the issue of seniority, another touchy Brewster problem, WLB ordered an entirely new clause.

Layoffs, Shapiro recommended, should be handled on a plant-wide basis within classifications rather than within grades of classifications, as was originally suggested by the former management.

Management has the right to hire new employes, even if there are laid-off employes in other grades within the same classification, unless there are available employes in lower grades of the same classification who are able and qualified to do the available work.

The provision that transfers must obtain joint approval of the shop committee was abolished. A permanent transfer can be made by the company except where money or promotional considerations are involved. In that event, seniority within the grade of classification and ability govern. Management's proposal for overtime on the basis of within grades of classification was included.

The classification of "leadmen" set up by the former management was abolished and replaced by a classification known as "Section Sub-Foremen." This classification was covered by the collective bargaining unit with the understanding that no group leader, section sub-foreman or assistant supervisor shall be subject to discipline by the union for any act on his pa: connected with his supervisory duties.

"A strong desire exists to work together in peace and harmony so that more and better airplanes can be produced at the Brewster plants," Shapiro informed WLB.

Kaiser called the spirit of Brewster workers "fine."

Out-of-Town Mail Rate Boost Voted

By Samuel W. Bell
New York, Herald-Tribune Bureau

The House Ways and Means Committee, supplementing its recent action increasing the in-city postage rate from 2 to 3 cents, voted yesterday to advance the out-of-town rate from 3 to 4 cents as a temporary revenue expendient in lieu of more taxes.

At the same time, the committee, reacting to definite pressure, reversed a previous rate increasing the airmail postal rate from 6 cents an ounce to 10 cents and compromised on 8 cents.

Continuing its reconsideration of previous actions on a long and varied list of service charges and excise taxes, the committee paused long enough to pick up an estimated 140 million dollars by a neat trick of double taxation. The proposal, tentatively approved late yesterday, was to eliminate as allowable deductions from income taxes, any excise, admission or other Federal taxes now paid in the course of the year.

$2,183,000,000 Yield Gain

As the result of the changes made by the committee today, all subject presumably to further changes if the votes can be mustered, Chairman Robert L. Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina announced that the tax bill, as it now stands, should yield $2,183,000,000 in additional revenue.

Other changes approved by the Ways and Means Committee yesterday included:

A decision to raise the admission tax from 1 to 2 cents for each 10-cent charge instead of the 3 cents rpeviously voted at the suggestion of the treasury.

Publication Rates Vary

Exemption of newspapers and religious publications from the proposed increase in the second class mail rate from a present 1 cent for each 2 ounces to 1 cent for 1 ounce. Other magazines apparently will pay the increased rate, according to the meager explanation offered by members of the committee.

Clarification of the present tax on automobile tires and tubes to make sure that synthetic rubber tires and tubes would pay the present tax of 5 cents a pound on tires and 9 cents on tubes.

An administrative provision also was approved to remove the penalty now imposed on employers who fail to pay unemployment taxes to a State within the certain period now required by the Social Security Act. Mr. Doughton said, however, that this would be positively the last administrative change the committee would undertake before reporting the tax bill.

Masons Elect C. B. Dean

Announcement was made yesterday of the election of C. B. Dean, 2612 North Pershing dr., Arlington, to be grand master of the first veil of the Grand Chapter, Royal Arch Masons of Virginia.

Poverty-Crazed Cripple, Jobless, Kills Bride, 19

Elgin, Ill., Nov. 1 (AP).—An unemployed cripple strangled his 19-year-old "mail order" bride with her own stocking, State's Attorney Charles G. Seidel said today, because the man "didn't want to see her suffer too much," from poverty.

Seidel said Paul A. Peters, 32, signed a confession that he strangled his wife, Helen, last night because of worry over his failure to get a job, the fact the rent was due and his belief that she was going to become a mother.

Mrs. Peters met Peters through a "lonely hearts" correspondence organization, Seidel said. They were married in 1942.

Peters is crippled in both legs as the result of infantile paralysis.

Court Decrees Shilkret Must Pay Back Taxes

The United States Court of Appeals decreed yesterday that Nathaniel Shilkret, musician, must pay $16,000 in back Federal income taxes for 1936-1937.

Shilkret appealed from a decision of the tax court of the United States, maintaining he was domiciled in California where community property laws permit husband and wife to file returns separately for one half the total income received by only one of them.

Roosevelt Tells of New Job Freeze

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Philadelphia, Nov. 1.—President Roosevelt, in a message read today at the opening of the Sixth Annual Convention of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, announced a new program of freezing labor to jobs would be inaugurated shortly.

The President did not explain, but it was assumed by delegates that his message was a hint of legislation to be introduced shortly. The CIO, is opposed to any form of job freezing by legislation.

Roosevelt said he "expected" the convention to renew its no-strike pledge for the duration of the war, and this the delegates unanimously did without qualifications.

Effort to Control Prices

Roosevelt said every effort was being made to hold down prices. One of the principal complaints of labor is that prices have soared while wages have been frozen under the Little Steel formula.

The convention's no-strike resolution, carried the implication that for the duration of the war the CIO would substitute action on the political front, for strike issues between labor and management, the resolution stated, must be solved by collective bargaining, mediation or by the National War Labor Board.

For the first time in the history of the CIO President Philip Murray revealed the organization's membership. It now has 5,285,000 dues-paying members and an additional one million in good standing, he said. The American Federation of Labor has contended the CIO's membership figures were padded.

Murray's Keynote

Murray, in his keynote speech, said the Government's wage stabilization policy was "wholly outmoded," unworkable and "impractical of successful operation." He referred to the "Little Steel" formula which allows increases up to 15 per cent over the level which prevailed on January 1, 1941. He denounced Congress for having fought both President Roosevelt's anti-inflation program and the CIO's endeavor to control inflation by limiting prices.

Luce Labor Draft Support Grows; Hearings Predicted

Early House Military Committee hearings on legislation creating an "Army and Navy Maintenance Corps" of deferred male registrants to back up the military on the home production front last night was predicted by ranking members of the group.

Reports on the measure, introduced last week by Representative Clare Luce (Republican), of Connecticut, meanwhile were requested by the committee from the War and Navy Departments and the Manpower Commission.

Committee interest in the legislation, designed to break the national service bill impasse and provide a steady flow of labor to undermanned aircraft and ohter vital war industries, was sparked by the spread of the coal strike.

Representative John M. Costello (Democrat) of California, chairman of the Military Subcommittee which revised the fathers' draft bill, unqaulifiedly indorsed the purpose of the bill and predicted the Army report will be "favorable."

Representative R. Ewing Thomason (Democrat) of Texas, ranking member of the Military Committee, said: "Mrs. Luce has got something."

Committee Chairman Andrew J. May was in Kentucky for today's gubernatorial elections. Hearings on the legislation are expected to be held shortly after his return, with spokesmen for key Federal agencies invited to testify.

Provisions of Bill

The Luce bill would induct men deferred from actual military service into a nonuniformed corps auxiliary to the Army, which would be drawn on as needed for vital war production tasks when voluntary or union manpower was no longer available. The men would receive the same pay and benefits as Army men, with the difference between their pay and the actual wage for the job paid into the Treasury by the employer. Invocation of the act would be discretionary with the President.

Costello told newsmen he believed the Luce bill, or one similar to it which the committee could work out, would act as "a powerful psychological deterrent to men leaving vital jobs for other employment," since job changers would be among the first inducted into the corps.

Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey advised the Senate Military Affairs Committee last August that if Congress intends to enact legislation providing for assignment of persons to vital work, it should provide that the persons be assigned as civilians rather than as members of the armed forces. Hershey suggested: "Civilians could, however, be members of an auxiliary corps attached to but not part of the armed forces."

Before the Senate committee on September 9, Lieut. Col. Francis V. Keesling, Selective Service liaison officer, also discussed the feasibility of "a special corps, which would be either a part of the War Department or auxiliary to it."

Long before introducing her bill, Mrs. Luce received an indorsement of the principles from Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson during House committee hearings on October 12 on the fathers' draft bill.

Patterson testified that legislation to conscript men rejetced by the Army and assign them to essential war work "would be good . . . that would help us."

Convict Asks Court To Let Him Invent

Norman Baker, imprisoned in Leavenworth Penitentiary after conviction of a postal law violation, yesterday filed suit in District Court against the Attorney General, the Director of Prisons, and his warden because he isn't allowed to "perfect inventions" to help out the war effort.

Baker said that before 1942, his warden allowed him freedom to invent, but that the current administration will not. He says he is working on such things as torpedoboats, rapid-fire guns, food preservation, and methods for boat propulsion.

The suit contends Baker, by being restrained from his talents, has lost $250,000 and continues to lose $500 daily.

Britain Has Transport Version of Lancaster

London, Nov. 1 (AP).—Britain's newest plane, designed for postwar aerial passenger and freight traffic, is a transport version of the Lancaster, the RAF's principal heavy night bomber. It will carry 50 passengers and is convertible for freight for flights of around 1000 miles.

Realty Operator Indicted As Housing Fraud Suspect

Hitting at one of Washington's housing problems, the District Grand Jury returned three indictments yesterday against Jeannus Burrell Parks, 39, Negro, charged with embezzlement and larceny after trust by fraudulently accepting $1,280.69 as down payments on houses.

Assistant United States Attorney Sylvan Schwartz, who prepared the indictments, said that Parks had been operating without a license here for some time and was "cashing in on the tight housing situation." Parks, who resided at 1402 Hamlin st. ne., was charged with taking the money and never handing over titles to houses.

A total of 46 indictments were returned in District Court before Justice Edward C. Eicher.

Eugene T. Conners, 32, a civilian employe of the War Department formerly stationed in South America, was charged with forgery of a false expense claim to obtain plane passage back to this country after Army authorities refused to grant him the necessary certificates.

C. W. Ramseyer, Commissioner Of Court of Claims, Succumbs

Stricken with a heart attack at his office yesterday, C. William Ramseyer, commissioner of the United States Court of Claims, died at Emergency Hospital shortly after noon.

A former Republican Representative from Iowa, Mr. Ramseyer was appointed to the Court of Claims in 1933 at the expiration of his term in Congress.

Born near Collinsville, Butler County, Ill., March 13, 1875, he was educated at the Southern Iowa Normal School, Iowa State Teachers College and the University of Iowa Law School.

Mr. Ramseyer taught school for six years in Iowa and then began practicing law in Bloomfield, Iowa. In 1910 he was elected county attorney of Davis County and re-elected in 1912.

While serving his second term as county attorney, Mr. Ramseyer was elected Representative from the Sixth District of Iowa and was re-elected to succeeding Congresses until 1932.

He was appointed to the Court of Claims on March 4, 1933, and retained the position until his death.

In 1915, Mr. Ramseyer married Miss Ruby Phillips of Iowa. The couple had two daughters. He is survived by his wife, and the daughters, Mrs. James L. Cameron of Washington and Mrs. Frederick H. Walton, jr., of Fort Leavenworth, Kans.

The commissioner's body will be shipped to his home State tomorrow for burial.

Mrs. Isabella H. James

Mrs. Isabella Hagner James, widow of Norman James and the first social secretary at the White House, died Sunday night at her home in Baltimore after a brief illness.

Born in Washington, Mrs. James was a daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. Charles E. Hagner and a niece of the late Justice Alexander Burton Hagner of the Supreme Court in the District. Creator of the position of social secretary in the White House, she first served in that capacity for Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt. Later she filled the same position for the late Mrs. Ellen Axson Wilson during her husband's administration.

Since her marriage in 1915 to Norman James, a lumber dealer, Mrs. James has been living in Baltimore. Survivors in Washington include her sister-in-law, Mrs. Randall H. Hagner; two nieces, Mrs. Moran McConihe and Miss Isabella Hagner, and three nephews, Maj. Alexander B. Hagner, U. S. Army, McGill James, and Randall H. Hagner, jr.

Funeral services will be held at 4 p. m. today at Old St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church in Baltimore. Burial will be in that city.

Free Austria Pledge Called Lift to Morale

The Moscow Conference declaration for the reestablishment of a "free and independent Austria" was viewed yesterday as "one of the most important steps to break up the Third Reich from within" by Egon Ranshofen-Wertheimer, former Austrian member of the League of Nations secretriat.

Interviewed in the wake of the announcement of the Moscow agreement which constituted the first United Nations recognition of Austria's nationhood and right to self - determinatoin, Ranshofen-Wertheimer expressed his conviction that the declaration will not only "tremendously boost and encourage" the Austrian underground movement but will also be an "important step toward the unification of all Austrian political groups in exile and the eventual formation of a representative body in the council of the United Nations."

Ranshofen-Wertheimer, who is visiting professor of International Affairs at American University, cited reports reaching him from Austria which would indicate complete unity among all groups fighting against the Nazis "with ever more success" and asserted that the differences among Austrians were smaller than in virtually every other occupied country.

With a view at the Anglo-American campaign in Italy and large-scale warfare in the Balkans, he stressed the importance of the Austrian hinterland through which all German troops have to move in a shifting of Nazi armies from one front to the other.

"Sabotage in Austria is widespread," he said, and "apt" psychological warfare, based on the Moscow declaration, should lead to "an early breakdown of the Nazi war machine and industry in Austria."

Asserting that only the Habsburg question was standing in the way of political unity among Austrians, Ranshofen-Wertheimer declared that the "legitimists" had agreed to shelve the problem until the Austrian people are able to decide it themselves.

Curley Freed Of Indictment For Conspiracy

Representative Curley (Democrat) of Massachusetts was freed yesterday of an indictment charging him and five others with conducting a war broker racket here, when Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher of District Court ruled that the grand jury which returned the indictment was illegally impaneled.

The voided indictment charged conspiracy and mail fraud by Curley, Donald Wakefield Smith, former National Labor Relations Board member; Marshall J. Fitzgerald of 930 16th st. nw.; James G. Fuller, now serving a five-year jail term for sending fraudulent securities through the mails; James B. Underwood, now on furlough from the Greek Air Forces, and Bertram Hall of Dallas, Tex.

The motion on which the justice dismissed the indictment was filed by Attorney Arthur J. Hilland for Underwood, and by Nicholas J. Chase, who represents Smith and Curley. It questioned the right of Justice James W. Morris to summon the grand jury.

The District of Columbia statute which governs choosing of a grand jury specifically states that only the Chief Justice of the court or the Senior Associate Justice is empowered to choose an additional grand jury when one is already sitting. When James W. Morris signed the order on July 31 summoning the Curley grand jury, he was a "senior presiding justice."

Late yesterday, Tom Clark, chief of the criminal division, Justice Department, stated that as soon as a proper examination of Justice Eicher's opinion has been made, the department will decide whether to appeal to a higher court or to present the case to a new grand jury.

The defendants were charged in the voided indictment with operating in 1941 an agency known as the "Engineer's Group, Inc.," which was alleged to have been used to fraudulently obtain $69,000 from industrial concerns seeking contracts with the Government.

Mrs. Pauline Wellbrock

Funeral services for Mrs. Pauline S. Wellbrock, 59, who died at her home in the Navy Yard, Sunday, will be held tomorrow at 3 p. m. at Fort Myer Chapel. Interment will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

She was the wife of Comdr. John H. Wellbrock, chief of staff of the Potomac River Naval Command.

Other survivors are A. F. Schlatter, brother, New York; Mrs. O. H. Dodson, daughter, wife of Commander Dodson, Washington, and a grandson, John Dennis Dodson.

De Marigny Fingerprint Still Questioned

Nassau, Bahamas, Nov. 1 (AP).—The defense agreed today that Alfred de Marigny made the fingerprint being used in an effort to convict him of the murder of Sir Harry Oakes.

But his attorneys fought the contention that the print was found on a bed screen in the room where his father-in-law was slugged and burned last July.

Frank Conway, New York police identification expert, testified the fingerprint—Exhibit J—is identical with the fingerprint of De Marigny's right little finger.

Chief Defense Counsel Godfrey Higgs charged Saturday that two Miami police officers—Captains James O. Barker and E. W. Melchen—had faked the fingerprint by obtaining it from an object touched by De Marigny after the slaying of the rich baronet.

Defense Charge Denied

Barker had testified he lifted the print from the bedscreen onto the piece of adhesive rubber, but admitted he could not designate the exact spot from which it came. He vehemently denied Higgs' accusation.

Today, Associate W. E. A. Callender sought in cross-examination of Conway to show that Barker had erred in lifting the print instead of leaving it on the original surface for exhibition to the jury.

Higgs tried unsuccessfully last week to have the fingerprint thrown out, contending a lifted print is not proper evidence.

But the Crown, anticipating the line the cross-examination of Conway would take, had set the stage to its own liking.

"Is lifting good practice?" inquired Special Prosecutor A. F. Adderley before concluding his direct examination.

Good Practice, Expert Says

"Absolutely, it is good practice," Conway replied.

He said prints seldom are processed on the original surface.

"A good technician would lift the print or photograph it, and sit at his ease and process it," Conway said. "This does not damage the original latent print.

"If it is left on the object, there is a chance of damaging it by touching it with a glass.

"It is awkward to look at a print on an object and then turn to examine the rolled impression for comparison."

Conway defended the decision of Barker not to photograph the impression on the screen when no fingerprint camera was available.

To Patrons of The Waldorf-Astoria:

Because of current conditions of congested travel and crowded hotels, we feel it our duty to reach Waldorf patrons with this frank statement of what is required to meet the situation.

In the first place, please give us notice in advance of your anticipated arrival and departure. But remember that such notice alone does not constitute a reservation. It must first be confirmed by us. Then, it is equally important to realize that transportation out of New York is difficult to obtain on short notice, because of the unusually heavy demands for railroad accommodations. Therefore, those coming here will find it wise to obtain out-going travel accommodations at the same time they secure accommodations to New York. Otherwise, departure delays are likely.

This whole matter becomes one of planning and cooperation. We are not asking you not to come to New York. We are simply suggesting, in your interest and ours, how to come.

A FRIEND you'd like to see more of

The speed with which Mount Vernon moves from the dealers' shelves is proof enough of how many friends this mild and mellow rye has made. Those friends, though, do create a problem. They're calling for more and more Mount Vernon at a time when all that is available comes from stocks laid by before the war.* That's bound to mean it's sometimes hard to find it on your dealer's shelves. We're as sorry about this as you are. But if you'll keep on asking for Mount Vernon, you'll get it—for the dealer who is sold out today may have some in tomorrow. Deliveries Of Soft Coal Limited to Ton

By Linton Burkett

Deliveries of soft coal were ordered limited to 1 ton per customer, beginning today, by Washington coal dealers following a meeting yesterday afternoon.

This move anticipated Federal action in limiting soft coal deliveries and followed the sales limit placed on hard coal by Solid Fuels Administrator Harold Ickes on Saturday.

The dealers, following a meeting at the headquarters of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, also announced they would start implementing the Federal order on hard coal, limiting deliveries to half a ton per domestic customer, or 10 days' supply, whichever is less.

Delivery curtailments of all coal will go into effect despite the action of President Roosevelt in taking over control of the mines and ordering the miners back to work, and will continue until coal actually begins moving into the city, it was asserted by representatives of the dealers.

Regarding the soft coal deliveries, A. P. Brown, chairman of the coal division of the association, said:

2 Way Limit On Deliveries

"It will be necessary to limit bituminous (soft coal) deliveries to householders to 1 ton and limit all coal deliveries to both commercial and domestic consumers to those having less than 10 days' supply on hand."

The extent to which Washington residents will be affected by the drastic cut in coal deliveries was indicated yesterday when coal men estimated that 100,000 homes and apartment houses in the city were heated with solid fuel.

On the other side of the picture it was pointed out there are now only 40,000 oil burners in use here.

Indicating the fear of the average householder that something of this nature would be forthcoming was the statement that local dealers already have received half of their total allotment for the year and almost all of this coal has already been placed in consumers' bins.

The original anthracite order of Saturday affected only domestic consumers, but as the coal picture grew darker yesterday, commercial, or business, users of hard coal also were brought under the terms of the restrictions, by Federal order.

The agreement of the coal merchants also brought commercial users of soft coal under the provisions of the limitation order yesterday.

Local dealers were uncertain as to how long the ban on large purchases would continue here, but were hopeful that some sort of governmental action shortly would alleviate the strike situation which is the cause of the restrictions.

While coal is really being rationed by reason of curtailed deliveries, it was learned from an authoritative source that the Solid Fuels Administration frowns on any plan to ration the fuel by coupon and it is not believed this sort of control is in the cards.

Although it was not possible to gauge the quantity of coal in storage in Washington, in the yards of dealers, in transit, and in the bins of consumers, it was learned that shipments of the fuel to the city since April 1 had been slightly greater than during a similar period in 1942.

However, this could easily have been offset, it was pointed out, by oil users converting to coal—at the instance of Petroleum Administrator for War Ickes.

Most of the coal coming into the city already has been placed in consumers' bins and dealers were of the opinion that most householders were in position to struggle along for the time being.

300 Welcome Gable Back From the Wars

Will there Be a Real Whiskey Shortage?

An ALL Rye Whiskey, like B. P. R., is almost out of this world! Relatively little of this 98% Rye Grain whiskey has ever been made.

And of course, all whiskies are being carefully rationed to last until more can be distilled and properly aged. Yet in this city, there is as much B. P. R. being distributed to dealers as before the war.

If you can't get it, too many people have asked for it first. Yet we want our old customers to get their fair share.

So go to your B. P. R. dealer . . . remind him of the amount you have bought in the past . . . and ask him to save you your share of the B. P. R. apportioned to him.

Do this and you should always be able to get a reasonable share of the fine bonded B. P. R. that is being reserved for this territory.

B. P. R. sales are being regulated to make B. P. R. last for seven years (until more can be distilled and properly aged).

Remember B. P. R. is an authentic ALL Rye bonded whiskey, distilled from 98% Rye Grain.

The initials B. P. R. stand for Baltimore Pure Rye Distilling Company . . . and assure you the ALL Rye whiskey that has long been a favorite whiskey in the famous whiskey State of Maryland.

And remember, too, that B. P. R. is 100 Proof . . . so you can get more drinks per bottle . . . with just as much grand Rye flavor as if you used a bigger jigger.

You can recognize B. P. R. instantly by its steel-engraved, bank-note label!

Why Your "Putt-Putt" of Tomorrow Will Deliver Hundreds of Extra Trips to Where They're Bitin'!

EVERY minute your outboard motor spends on the stern of your boat, it is exposed to the danger of rust.

But after the war, when you can again buy a "putt-putt," a miracle of metal protection can help your motor—and your light, sturdy metal boat—resist rust up to four times as long, assuring you hundreds of extra trips to where they're bitin'.

This new armor against rust is called "Corronizing." It's a simple, inexpensive process developed, tested and proved through years of research by Standard Steel Spring Company. It awaits only Victory to affect your daily life in hundreds of ways.

For example: window screens can last up to four times as long. You'll get more years of service from roof gutters, ventilators, automobile bumpers and mufflers, electrical equipment, heating and air conditioning equipment and washing machines. Farmers will buy equipment that resists rust up to four times as long.

At present, Standard Steel is making armor plate, bombs and other war material. "Corronized" products must wait for the days of peace.

But when that time comes, it will pay you to look for the "Corronized" label on metal products you buy. It will be your guarantee of getting more service for your money . . . products that can last up to four times as long.

Rent Control

Rent control presents peculiar difficulties in Washington, which has experienced a population growth of more than a quarter of a million residents since 1940. Residential construction has obviously not been able to keep pace with this increased demand for homes. That rentals have, in the main, been kept to reasonable levels is a tribute to the soundness of the District Emergency Rent Act and to the energy of its administrator, Robert Cogswell. The record has on the whole, been a great deal more satisfactory during the past two years than it was during the first World War.

There have, of course, been flagrant violations of rent ceilings in the District. In leasing houses and apartments, landlords have always been accustomed to charge just about as much as the market would permit. The rental value of a residence cannot readily be standardized; it varies widely from community to community throughout the country and from locality to locality within any given city. And when large numbers of transient newcomers bid against one another for places to live, rentals almost inevitably start skyrocketing.

If exorbitant rentals have been exacted for the more luxurious private homes in the District, it can at least be said that the prices charged for more modest dwellings and apartments have been kept fairly well in line. Effective rent control plainly requires the cooperation of renters. Those willing to be gouged will undoubtedly find landlords willing to oblige them. But the protection of the law is available to those who seek it. As Mr. Cogswell puts it, "If a tenant thinks he is not getting a square deal, he or she should confer at once with the Rent Administration." Control can be exercised only through acting on complaints, only through a resort to the law by those whom it was designed to shield.

Newspaper Subsidies

Senator Bankhead's newspaper subsidy bill reported out by the Committee on Banking and Currency last week is put forward as a means of helping the Treasury sell war bonds. It would permit the expenditure of up to 30 million dollars for Treasury advertising, chiefly in small-town papers. We think it quite probable that the bill would hurt rather than help war bond sales. In the recent successful Third War Loan drive both small-town and metropolitan newspapers gave an enormous amount of free space to encourage the sale of bonds. The mere pittance of advertising that could be bought with 30 million dollars a year might dampen the enthusiasm of both the newspapers and their commercial advertisers for giving space to bond drives without charge. The opposition of the Treasury to the Bankhead bill should be sufficient to shatter the idea that it would be of assistance in financing the war.

Congress will pass this bill only if it concludes that newspapers should be subsidized. So the measure involves a principle of very great importance and we hope that this fact will not be overlooked because the amount of the subsidy proposed is comparatively small. Should the principle itself be accepted, there would probably be pressure from the subsidized press to increase the subsidies. And in all fairness, as Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo pointed out as long ago as 1917, the benefits would have to be equalized among all media of expression. Magazines, broadcasters and perhaps the motion picture industry, too, would demand their share of this easy money. Where would the process of subsidizing expression of opinion end?

No reasonable person will deny that payments direct to newspapers from the Government would endanger freedom of the press. The editor of a country paper drawing any substantial portion of his income from the Government would certainly not feel as free to criticize public policy as he otherwise would be. Congressmen would be in a position to intimidate small publishers in financial straits by threatening to repeal the subsidy act. We cannot avoid the conclusion that the influence of the Bankhead bill would be sinister, aside from the fact that it would involve a useless expenditure of public funds. The people of this democracy are still intelligent enough to decide for themselves which newspapers should live and which should perish. If there ever comes a time when they are incapable of making such decisions, we may as well begin looking for a dictator, for democracy itself will be on the way out.

Harmony At Moscow

Publication of the agreements arrived at in Moscow will put the entire Allied world in the President's mood of jubilation. The foreign ministers accomplished three purposes of paramount importance. They arranged for the dovetailing of Russian with Anglo-American strategy in encompassing the speedy downfall of Hitlerite Germany. They built a framework of active collaboration for the settlement of political problems. They subscribed to the need for relying upon collective security through the establishment of a league of nations. That they also settled several specific issues came as a dividend out of a conference that was intended only to lay down principles of agreement. All three conferees are to be warmly complimented on their success. Equally notable with the content of the documentation is the spirit that informs it. He would have to be a jaundiced person, indeed, who failed to catch something of the eagerness to agree and to dispose of all outstanding problems which marked the deliberations in Moscow.

What has heretofore been lacking in the relations between Moscow and the rest of the Allied world has now been provided. That is faith. In Moscow the fear that the British and the Americans were more anxious to conserve manpower than to bring the war to an early termination has been pronounced. In London and Washington there has been no knowledge of what was going on inside Russia which would enable them to dovetail their strategy with Moscow's. It was thus essential, as the preliminary to the military talks, to reestablish confidence. Only in this atmosphere could the conferees discuss the measures to be taken to shorten the war against Germany and her satellites in Europe. Naturally there could be no disclosure of those measures. The main thing is that they will be pursued in concert. This is coalition strategy at last, and it means that the ring will be drawn around Hitler in accordance with a plan wrought in common. It is to be hoped that the advent of a schematic plan of operations will put a quietus to the nonsense about the rivalry to get to Berlin first.

The Senate no doubt will take note of the recognition of the necessity for a league of nations. The recognition occurs in a four-power declaration which ranges China alongside the three conference powers. No doubt the inclusion of China is a tribute to President Roosevelt's statesmanship. In the declaration there is no boggling over the indefinite article. "They recognize," runs the statement, "the necessity of establishing at the earliest practicable date a general international organization, based on the principle of the sovereign equality of all peace-loving states, and open to membership by all such states, large and small, for the maintenance of international peace and security." We suggest the Senate examine and approve this four-power declaration in place of the vague Connally resolution. Here is the answer to the argument heard in obstructionist ranks that we ought to wait till we know where the other nations stand. We know now. Russia in this declaration has again thrown her influence on the side of the principle that war is one and indivisible in this attenuated world. Collective security, in other words, has taken the place of "the preventive encirclement strategy" which Moscow adopted after the pact of Munich.

In the meantime the framework for settling political problems in Europe will provide the necessary interim system for safeguarding peace in the transition period. The mode is the Mediterranean Commission. A similar commission is now to be set up in London to examine problems as they arise and make recommendations to the three governments. An advisory council also is set up for Italy. The mandate for this council, with its provision for the restoration of democratic processes in Italy, is altogether in accord with the war aims of the United Nations. With Italy, however, an account has to be settled as a result of her recent status as an enemy country. For this reason the Advisory Council, like the Mediterranean Commission, will include a representative of the French Committee of National Liberation. Delegates will later be added from two countries which were also victims of Italian aggression, Greece and Yugoslavia. Perhaps this opening wedge will permit the three powers to attempt a joint intervention in these Balkan countries with a view to ending the internal turmoil there.

The conference left most specific problems to be resolved by this new machinery or by the Big Three themselves. There is no mention of the Eastern boundaries. But the cordiality of the exchanges gives hope that Moscow by unilateral act will proceed to reestablish relations with the Polish government-in-exile as the first step in composing the knotty Polish-Russian tangle. Little about the future of Germany appears in the documents. To be sure, the Russians have agreed that the Nazi criminals will be brought to the bar of justice to answer for their crimes. But exactly what should be done to Germany itself is left for future consideration. All we know from the three foreign ministers is that Austria will be separated from Germany. But, as we have already said, all these details were outside the frame of reference of the Moscow conferees. What issues out of the meeting is a broad outline of general agreement which in both content and spirit is an insurance of detailed agreement. The agreements confound the men of little faith who felt that no good could come out of the conference. Actually the three foreign ministers have launched on Germany a hammer blow the sound of which will reverberate through the stricken Reich. Elsewhere the agreements augur well for the averting of European chaos in the transition period and for peace and concord in the war's hereafter.

Moral Casualties

The learned Professor Sorokin of Harvard, who has made quite a study of the subject, finds that some wars lead to a general breakdown of morals in the belligerent countries, but that other wars—such, for example, as the Franco-Prussian War of 1870-71—do not. There is very little question as to which category the present war belongs in. The evidence is on every side, but it is by no means a purely American phenomenon. A report comes from London of the increasing concern by the government of Great Britain over some of the social consequences of more than four years of war. According to this report, the Ministry of Health is deeply worried about the spread of venereal disease and especially of syphilis. There, as here, the principal sources of contagion are apparently not professional prostitutes, but young girls on the loose.

To this sort of delinquency the great contributing reason has been the general sense of tension and insecurity and the breakup of homes due to the mobilization of women in war industry. Even more proportionately than the United States, it appears, Britain swarms with "latchkey children." The number of children arrested for offenses serious enough for indictments has risen by 25 per cent since 1939, but it is probable that there, as here, the increase is much larger than is indicated by the number of arrests.

What the situation concerning juvenile morals may be in the occupied countries of Europe, we can, of course, only conjecture. There, apparently, family life and all traditional restraints have been pretty well obliterated by such factors as wholesale hunger forced evacuations, repeated bombings, and the wholesale deportations of parents. With the victory, the curtain may lift upon a picture of juvenile degradation that now defies the imagination. When one considers these too seldom-mentioned aspects of total war, it becomes more and more apparent how formidable will be the task of reconstruction—that the astronomical figures released from time to time by the Treasury Department represent but a minor element of the total cost.

Treasury Of Books

Rare books are apt to be "caviar to the general." It is unfortunate that this is so, for they posses a fascination beyond their curiosity or the peculiar delight they afford to a collector's eye. They are a part of the wellspring of our culture. Some of them embrace the original expression of ideas or values now so current among us as to be commonplace. More even than monuments or tombs, old books are the enshrinement of man's historic growth.

The Library of Congress now has on exhibition a collection of rare books and manuscripts collected by Lessing J. Rosenwald and presented by him to the Nation. No comparable treasury of our literary past has ever before been available to the public view. The earliest printing of the Lord's Prayer in English is there. So is one of the first editions of the 1462 Bible. Books were made with loving care in the old days, and the Library has on view some lettered by hand and beautifully illuminated and embellished. We are somewhat inclined, perhaps, to take such treasures for granted—until we hear of their destruction by barbarians, as the Nazis not long ago wantonly destroyed priceless volumes in the library at Naples. The Rosenwald collection at the Library of Congress now belongs to all of us. It is worthy of our attention.

AUTUMN WALK

Always the way stretched wide before her feet
And the lush grass of marshes at her side
Lured her to ravaging of wind and space
Where little curls of undulating tide
Pushed at her footprints, cooled her passing heel
With icy tendrils. Autumn set her seal
Of purple mist against her eager eyes
That scanned this world with vagabond surprise.

"This way lies Paradise for dreams and wishing,"
Ran her young thoughts. The clouds raced grey and blown
Above the flattened landscape, and the glory
Of flooding sunset scarred the fading town
With a long pointed finger. Hasten, hasten
While there is time to mark this mellow ground
With the firm pressure of your strength and going,
While your young ears can hear the tinkling sound
Of silver trumpets in the tall marsh grasses,
When motley-coated autumn swiftly passes.

Always the way stretched wide before her eyes,
The world of autumn, rich with gold of leaves
And tangled bayberry twigs. Sandpiper wings
Flashed near a quiet pool. No traveler grieves
For this bright passing. Turning, she remembers
The marsh that has been there, the late September's
Salt-driven sand that slipped between her fingers—
And the cool, jagged rock forever lingers.

MARGUERITE JANVRIN ADAMS

German Shipping

By Kurt Singer

Severe Shortages

EVEN THE ingenuity of Dr. Joseph Goebbels was heavily taxed during recent months when he had to explain away the drop in sinking by submarines. As Germans have only recently heard about their own shipping shortage, the job was doubly difficult.

It was tight-lipped, tall and arrogant Karl Kauffmann, the "Gauleiter" of Hamburg and the Reich commissioner for shipping and former leader of the 1923 saboteurs, who astonished the Reich with the news that the shipping shortage was so serious "as to put the interests of Germany at stake."

The deadly effect of the Allied air war on German shipping was for the first time disclosed to the German public in the "Hamburger Fremdenblatt' when Rear Admiral von Lohmann announced that only two million tons of shipping entered Norwegian ports in 1942, and Baltic traffic in the same year amounted to 26 million tons. (As Germany's total prewar merchant fleet was 3,100,000 tons, it would show that the same ships frequently make the round trip.)

All this shipping is top-class priority; 19 million tons are used to bring Swedish iron ore to Germany, and take coal and coke to Sweden, Norway, Denmark and Finland. The remainder is used for military supplies and food necessary to hold down Norway and Finland.

Coal Traffic

The RAF and the American Flying Fortresses had a fine opportunity to hit this iron ore and coal traffic routed in the traditional way from Lulea in Sweden and Narvik in Norway to Rotterdam for transshipment on Rhine barges or from the Swedish Oxelosund to the Pomeranian cities of Stettin and Rostock.

Bombing of German coastal shipping has forced the Nazi shipping authorities to transfer a large proportion of the traffic to the port of Emden, a considerable Allied bombing victory, which may have important repercussions in the Reich.

Emden's port facilities are not nearly as good as those of Rotterdam. It means also longer barge hauls to and from the Ruhr, and an extra burden imposed on the already strained and damaged facilities of the Dortmund-Ems Canal. Another drawback is that while Rhine barges carry some 3000 to 4000 tons, Emden Canal barges displace only 1500 tons. The greatest difficulty, however, will be the fact that iron ore will enter the Ruhr at Dortmund, instead of Duisburg, where most of the great steel works are still situated.

Shipping Commissioner Kauffmann's troubles assumed international dimensions when a number of Swedish ships went down after hitting mines or being torpedoed by Russian submarines. The Swedes need coal badly, but they made it very clear that they could not indefinitely sustain present losses.

Aerial Attacks

This was only the beginning. As the danger from aerial attacks grew, Kauffmann found it difficult to get foreign crews. The bonus paid to Swedish seamen on the Rotterdam route increased 300 per cent. Finnish sailors in ships trading in the Baltic get a bonus of 75 per cent, in the Kiel Canal and the Elbe, 100 per cent, in the North Sea, 150 per cent. In Holland and France the Nazis are trying to get crews by a mixture of coaxing, shanghaiing and terror; in Norway Kauffmann's agents apply pressgang methods, but in vain.

Recently, too, there has been trouble between the monopolistically inclined Hamburg shipowners and their rivals in other German ports. The mass bombing of Hamburg brought disunity among the German shipowners. When the Hamburg "Gauleiter" became Reich commissioner for shipping just over a year ago, powerful Hamburg shipowners saw to it that their business connections with the Gauleiter were rewarded by adequate preferential treatment.

Protests began to pile up. In September, 1942, Kauffmann was forced to declare that although he represented Hamburg he would look after the interests of all shipping circles, in an "objective manner." He broke his promise. In January, 1943, the shipowner Alfred Boehmaker called upon his fellow citizens of Bremen to resist the attempts of "certain circles" to discourage traffic to Bremen.

Bickering finally forced the Ministry of Transport to step in. A few weeks ago Hamburgers read in their newspapers that a certain Dr. Guenther Bergemann had been appointed Ministerial-Direktor in the Ministry of Transport, and head of the shipping office.

The "Hamburger Fremdenblatt" reported that Bergemann was a Civil Service official who specialized in foreign trade and exchange, and implied that he had little experience in shipping matters.

Bremen's intrigue had succeeded. A first-class row was on between the contending factions of German shipping, when Allied mass-bombardments destroyed the harbors of Hamburg and Bremen.

Invisible Wall

By Barnet Nover

Germany And The Moscow Pact

OUR GENERATION has justifiably grown contemptuous of Maginot Lines and Mareth Lines and Mannerheim Lines and other great barriers of stone and steel which nations have built to keep out invading armies.

One after another, such barriers have been broken or outflanked. And what has happened to them is now also happening to Hitler's once highly touted Festung Europa and to its inner bastion, the roofless Festung Germania.

Yet events now in process of unfolding may prove that what finally defeated Germany or, at any rate, hastened her doom, was a wall—an invisible wall—erected by three civilians named Anthony Eden, Vyacheslav Molotov and Cordell Hull.

GERMANY'S hope of victory which once flared so high has just about faded out altogether.

Very few Germans—and that small number probably does not include the Nazi hierarchy and the high command—still believe that they can defeat Russia, Britain and America.

What, for a year or more, they have banked their hopes on is that the Russians, the British and the Americans will not be able to defeat them.

FOR THE NAZIS the question is no longer one of winning, only one of surviving. The limit of their aspirations, in other words, is a compromise peace.

In order to achieve a compromise peace, however, one of three things must happen:

1. An increase in Germany's strength to the point where the widening gap between the Reich's resources and the resources of the Allies is narrowed and the growing margin of Allied superiority on land, at sea and in the air is reduced.

2. The prolongation of the conflict until the peoples of Russia, Britain and America become so war-weary as to be willing to accept peace as a substitute for victory.

3. A split in Allied ranks.

THE FIRST is out of the question.

For Germany the list of possible allies is now completely exhausted. The best she can hope for—and that best is none too good—is that what remains of the once impressive Axis coalition does not distintegrate any further.

In the meantime the combination of the sea blockade, which prevents Germany from tapping the resources acquired by Japan, and the air assault, which is cutting down her war production, is widening the gap between Germany's strength and those of the Allies.

Contributing to the same end is the circumstance that the resources of the Kuban, the Donbas and the Ukraine which the Nazis once had within their grasp have now been largely or wholly lost.

THE SECOND possibility—the growth of war-weariness in Allied lands and the development of sentiment in favor of a compromise peace through an indefinite prolongation of the war—is also very limited and the Nazi leaders know it.

They know that there is a far greater possibility of war-weariness developing among the German people who are losing and know they are losing than among the Allies, who are winning and know it, too.

That is why the defensive strategy employed by the German high command on the various fighting fronts has been accompanied by increasingly drastic measures taken under the direction of Heinrich Himmler to bolster up the German home front.

THERE REMAINS, then, the German hope that the Allies will fall out among themselves.

It was disunity, first among the anti-Nazi elements in the Reich, later among the nations that Germany had marked out as her victims, that enabled Hitler to get as far as he has. Disunity, and only disunity, among Germany's enemies can save Hitler today.

That is why Dr. Goebbels has been unsleeping in his efforts to sow dissension among the Allies. That is why the Germans have hugged to their bosoms every report of disagreement in United Nations ranks.

THE AGREEMENT reached at Moscow may disappoint some whose hopes have been raised sky high by President Roosevelt's jubilant statement of last Friday and who expected it to go further than it did, although actually it goes further than anyone could have dared expect a month ago.

The important thing about that agreement, however, is not so much its specific terms or their absence but the fact that the agreement symbolizes the unity of Britain, America and Russia in the waging of the war and the winning of the peace. For that reason Moscow must be regarded as a tremendous achievement.

That invisible but impregnable wall which the conferees at Moscow have erected will cut off what remains of Germany's light and air. Not far off are darkness—and defeat.

Ticket Scalpers

Not everyone who came to see the Redskins win a ball game Sunday got in to see it. It seems it was a sellout and tickets were not available for sale at the gate on that date. However, if you were willing to pay $3 or more for a single pasteboard stamped $1.10, the privilege of witnessing the spectacle was yours.

I was one of the many unwilling and am embittered not because I missed a good football game but for two other reasons.

First, the scalpers were having a field day. Now, I fully understand the difficulty of suppressing that racket, but the open brazen manner in which they were operating indicates that no attempts have been made to clean up the situation, notwithstanding the fact that such a practice is declared to be illegal. In fact, a policeman informed me, quite correctly, that my only chance of getting in was by doing business with a scalper.

Second, it was not pleasant to see servicemen getting a raw deal by having to "shell out" so much money to unscrupulous civilians enriching themselves by taking advantage of a situation which can be avoided.

I think the management is under a social obligation to place on sale at box office prices on the day of the game a block of tickets for servicemen, most of whom are in town just for the weekend and cannot purchase tickets during the week prior to the game.

Housing Shortage

There are large numbers of elderly retired people living in Washington, and no doubt many of them are wondering how they might directly contribute to the war effort. I would like to respectfully suggest a pleasant and easy way—leave Washington and live elsewhere for the duration. My husband and I are only one of literally hundreds of young couples walking the streets looking for a place—any place to live. The housing shortage has never been so acute as it is now.

I know that if the retired people in the two apartment houses in which I have lived in Washington would go South to some small town or city for the winter (where, incidentally, the climate is mild and there are no lines in the grocery stores), nearly a hundred apartments would be released for the use of those who have been ordered to Washington. We left our homes to help win the war. Now they might do the same—and find more pleasant living conditions to boot.

Dr. Adrian Escobar

Washington newspapers recently carried news of the return of Felipe Espil, the Argentine Ambassador to his homeland. One journal indicated it would take some time for official Washington to adjust to the new diplomat, Dr. Adrian Escobar, an older man. Felipe Espil served his country well and leaves a multitude of friends. The Argentine government however, has sent to the United States one of its ablest diplomats and scholars. We are indeed fortunate in having a man of Dr. Escobar's experience and education as the new ambassador from Argentina.

Dr. Escobar is a lawyer, a graduate of the University of Buenos Aires. He served as assistant secretary to President Manuel Quintana, and later as Secretary to President Jose Figueroa Alcorta. He was a member of the Argentine Congress for twenty-two years. While in Congress he initiated much social and economic legislation.

He was chairman of the committee of international affairs for a period of ten years and under his direction thirty-five treaties and pacts were approved. Among the most important were, the entrance of Argentina into the League of Nations, treaties with Great Britain and Brazil. His professional life has been full of rich contributions to his country. He served as professor of law at the National College of Buenos Aires and as president of the Argentine College of Lawyers. He served as president of the "Social Museum" and also president of the Argentine Institute of the Blind.

He served as Postmaster General of Argentina from February, 1938, to November, 1940, and was elected president of the 11th Congress of the Universal Postal Union. He represented Argentina at the 8th Pan-American Congress at Lima, Peru, in 1938.

Dr. Escobar has held various difficult but important diplomatic posts and has proven himself a wise and successful diplomat. He served as ambassador to Spain and to Brazil.

Reconstruction

A United Nations commission should be formed after this war with powers to sentence the soldiers of the Axis to hard labor. They should reconstruct railroads, hospitals, schools and orphanages which they have caused to be destroyed.

This will, in a small way, atone for their crimes. The dead cannot be resurrected but the living can be helped.

"Italia Libera"

By Paul Winkler

Underground Movement

THE ARREST in Apulia, Italy, of three prominent anti-Fascists for printing an "unauthorized" newspaper brought into the limelight the existence of a very real Italian underground movement, which so far had not been employed by the Allies.

"Italia Libera," for whose publication Vincenzo Calace and two companions were arrested, was not, as most Americans who read of its suppression may have assumed, a new publication. It was an established underground paper which proposed to convert itself into an open legal publication with the defeat of Fascism in Italy, but ran afoul of regulations limiting the right to print to officially recognized newspapers.

"Italia Libera" is not only the name of a paper, but also of the underground movement behind it, a powerful group with branches in all parts of Italy.

At the time when this group was founded, the march on Rome was only a year old, and Mussolini had not yet succeeded in consolidating his personal dictatorship, which actually dates only from 1925. It was, therefore, at its beginning, still an open movement, and one which quickly attracted more than 100,000 adherents. Republican and anti-Fascist, it was largely a young man's party, in refutation of Mussolini's claim that the youth of Italy was unanimously behind him.

Pacciardi was considered by the Fascists as the leading spirit in this movement. Then in his twenties, he was a lawyer; his law office was raided and smashed up several times by Fascist gangs, and finally burned. He was himself wounded four times in these attacks. In 1927, Mussolini introduced the laws of exception, which permitted him to exile his opponents to the penal islands without trial, and Pacciardi, on the advice of friends, got out of Italy.

Pacciardi and Sforza

"Italia Libera" went underground. Outside Italy, little was heard of it. But the incident of Apulia, and the arrest of one of its original founders, has provided today the demonstration that it has never given up the struggle which it initiated 20 years ago. Today, it seems possible that its action may be coordinated with that of other liberal forces—particularly with the activities of Count Sforza.

This development represents a return on Sforza's part to a position which some of his friends had feared he was quitting. Pacciardi and Sforza, both of whom came to the United States after the collapse of France, had worked closely together. But an estrangement developed as a result of Sforza's recent acceptance of the principle of collaboration with the House of Savoy. The rift reopened with Sforza's declaration, made before he left for Italy, in favor of Italian support for Badoglio.

"Italia Libera," which had always been resolutely republican, was not alone in its disappointment at this evolution on Sforza's part. Most of the famous Italian liberals, who had cooperated with this movement on many occasions, felt the same way—like the historians, Gaetano Salvemini and Giuseppe Borghese, and the leader of the former Catholic Populist Party, Don Sturzo. Arturo Toscanini wrote an extremely severe letter to Sforza condemning the attitude Sforza took before his departure to Italy.

But since his arrival in his native land, Sforza seems to have swung back again, and the split between himself and the "Italia Libera" group has lessened. He has discovered that Italians in Italy are not disposed to allow the King and Badoglio to consolidate their regime. The Partito d'Azione (Action Party), which considers Sforza as its intellectual leader, has come out definitely against Victor Emmanuel and the marshal. Adolfo Omodeo, rector of the University of Naples, the Italian head of the Action Party, has reluctantly agreed to accept Badoglio as temporary leader, but is quite open in his criticism of the obligation placed upon Italians to do so. Benedetto Croce, Italy's greatest living philosopher, likewise takes the attitude that Italy should make a clean sweep of the past regime.

Faced with this unanimity of opinion, Sforza, whose indecisiveness up to now may have been due to his own doubts as to what opinion inside Italy actually was, seems to be swinging back to closer agreement with "Italia Libera." His opinion should have weight with Allied leaders, and may be effective in gaining Anglo-Saxon support for "Italia Libera" and similar anti-Fascist movements of long standing to emerge from their underground status into open action, without risking, as in Apulia, the repressive action of local authorities acting under regulations intended to restrain Fascists, not anti-Fascists.

Meanwhile, for his part, Pacciardi is still hoping to gain permission to set up a Free Italian Battalion which would not be under Badoglio's orders. If this aim is achieved, there will then be on the Allied side not only Badoglio's forces, representing the new alignment of the regime which replaced Mussolini's, but also the Free Italians, who are anxious to help throw the Germans out of Italy, but not under the direction of anti-republican leaders.

Today And Tomorrow

Three Nations In Search Of A Policy

LIPPMANN

BECAUSE CONGRESS is about to make a new declaration, we must not suppose that the United States alone needs to alter its foreign policy. Britain and Russia, each in its own way, and all the other United Nations as well, are faced with the need of revising as radically as we need to, the guiding lines of their prewar policy.

None of the three powers at Moscow can look back upon its course since 1918 and fail to see how very nearly it led to disaster—Britain's to a war for which she was unprepared and without sufficient allies, Russia's to a war which brought upon her one of the most devastating invasions in history, America's to a war in which we have suffered humiliating defeats and have at gigantic cost to fight all over the world. It must not then be said, and it must never be thought, that the declaration by Congress and Secretary Hull's voyage to Moscow, mark a change in American policy alone. If, as we have reason to hope, Moscow is a new beginning, it will be only because all the United Nations have learned something important from their mistakes.

WE NOW KNOW that their combined power is needed in order to defeat the German-Japanese plan of conquest. It is, therefore, evident that if their power had been combined before the war began, they would either have prevented the war or would have won it more quickly and at much smaller cost. United now, we stand to win a complete victory over our enemies; when we were still divided, as we were in 1939, in 1940, and in 1941, Britain and Russia were very nearly destroyed, and America was very nearly left to face, alone, a victorious coalition in Europe and Asia.

The lines of policy which kept us divided in 1939, 1940, and 1941, were, therefo e, profoundly wrong. These lines of policy must be altered if we are to remain united to maintain the peace which follows this war.

THE AMERICAN line is known as isolation, and it has meant that our Government could take no diplomatic measures, except verbal measures, to defend American security until we were actually attacked. Our enemies could arm, could form hostile alliances against us, could seize strategic positions from which to attack us, could vanquish our natural allies; and still—under isolationism—the United States Government could only utter words and make gestures. This is the fatally fals principle of diplomacy which the Fulbright and Connally resolutions are designed to renounce and discard.

But the British and the Russians have also had their own brand of isolationism, as deeply rooted as ours in their traditions, which they have now to renounce and to discard.

THE BRITISH brand of isolationism is known by another name: it is known as the doctrine of the balance of power. It served the British reasonably well in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, just as our isolationism served us reasonably well until this century.

The British doctrine of the balance of power consisted in opposing the strongest military power in Europe by supporting the other military powers of Europe. This policy did not prevent war. But against Spain, France, and Germany, it enabled Britain to win eventually the great wars she had to fight.

THE ULTIMATE justification of the policy lay in the fact that first Spain, then France, and then Germany, were so close to the British Isles, that if they became supreme on the continent they could dominate and starve and destroy Britain. In 1918, however, when France was no longer a very great power and Germany was prostrate, the doctrine of the balance of power no longer served British interest. There was no very great power within striking distance of the British Isles. Nevertheless, the doctrine continued to shape, though confusedly, British foreign policy. Thus in the twenties, Britain tended to encourage the restoration of German power in order to balance the apparent and temporary military ascendancy of France. This was, as the event showed, a fatal mistake arising out of the old habits of British diplomacy.

Then, when Germany's military power revived in the thirties under Hitler—Britain having refused to prevent its revival—the obsolete habit of the balance of power led the predecessors of Mr. Churchill to hope that German aggression could be deflected towards the east, that is towards Russia. This was the inner meaning, as the Russians saw it, of the British appeasement of Hitler, and it led inexorably to the terrible failure to reach an agreement with Russia in the fateful summer of 1939. The failure to reach an agreement with Russia in 1939 meant that Britain had to begin the war on the continent with only Poland and France as her allies.

Britain is now, as a result not of her diplomacy but of Hitler's actions, the ally of Russia. But the continuance of this alliance, after Hitler is finished, depends on Britain's part upon how clearly and consistently she renounces the doctrine of the balance of power. For Russia will be the strongest continental state, and if Britain has not abandoned the doctrine of the balance of power, she cannot remain the ally of Russia.

THE RUSSIAN policy between the two great wars has proved to be no less unsound than American isolationism and the British doctrine of the balance of power. It was founded originally on the enormous error of promoting and counting upon a world revolution directed from Moscow, which automatically made practically every state an enemy of Russia, and at the same time upon strategic isolation, which meant that in a war Russia would have many enemies and no dependable allies. Later on—under Stalin—while continuing to support Communist parties abroad, the Russian government did earnestly experiment with collective security at Geneva. But the hostility aroused by the Communist agitation rendered impossible any confident dealing with Russia in maintaining the peace.

Still later on, that is to say after Munich, the Russian policy was nothing more than a frantic attempt to buy time to prepare, and to gain strategic advantages, for the inevitable war with Germany and Japan. Only the supreme valor of the Red Armies and the incredible exertions of the Russian people saved the Soviets from the loss of Moscow, Leningrad, and Stalingrad—losses which would have meant their defeat and their destruction.

THUS RUSSIA, too, has to alter her policy radically—renouncing revolutionary intervention abroad and discarding the policy of strategic isolation.

If then the Moscow conference is successful, in the sense that it portends a continuing collaboration by Britain, Russia, and America, and thus by all the United Nations, the success at Moscow will be due to the fact that all these powers have moved away from their prewar theories of how to conduct their foreign policy.

Basic Labor Policy Still Lacking

PUSEY

THE MOST disturbing fact about the coal crisis, it seems to me is not that the miners have walked out again. Rather it is that four Nation-wide coal strikes have been called in the last six months without producing a settlement of the original dispute. Instead of meeting this threat to the war effort squarely in the first place, the Administration has shifted from one expedient to another to avoid a showdown. That suggests a crisis in government as well as in the mining of coal to keep war plants going.

President Roosevelt attempted to meet the first three tie-ups through agencies created by executive decree and operating without the power of law behind them. Last June he was forced to seize the mines, without specific authority from Congress, to avert a calamitous breakdown in the war production program. Even after that experience he vetoed an act of Congress giving the War Labor Board power to deal with recalcitrants like John L. Lewis and specifically authorizing the President to take over mines or other war plants put out of operation by strikes. If Congress had not passed the Connally-Smith bill over Mr. Roosevelt's veto, the Administration would still be facing defiance that is akin to disloyalty, without an effective weapon to use against it.

No criticism is too harsh for the demagogue who has taken advantage of this governmental weakness by threatening four times to cripple the Nation's war effort unless his inflationary demands are met. John L. Lewis has consistently followed a policy of rule or ruin and nothing short of superior force is likely to turn him from that course. There is no excuse for his conduct. But, after all, John Lewis is not the custodian of our national interests in wartime. It is to the Government and not to him that we must look for the inauguration of policies that will keep our war plants operating with regularity and efficiency. And the Government has shifted its stand so many times that the miners still believe they can win by a policy of defiance.

TO BE SURE, the War Labor Board has stood its ground with a good deal of tenacity. It has labored mightily to maintair the "Little Steel" formula as a bulwark against inflation. But the lack of any over-all labor policy has left the board in a precarious position. The difficulty runs much deeper than maintenance of wage stability. At bottom it involves the responsibility of labor unions to their members and to the Nation of which they are a part. In this field no Government agency dealing with labor has a foundation on which to stand or to build.

It is no accident, of course, that the country does not have a consistent and well-balanced labor policy. The President has no patience with comprehensive policies that are tied to basic principles. More than 11 years ago he outlined his favorite method of handling public affairs. Take a plan and try it, he said; if it doesn't work, discard it and try another. That is precisely the sort of improvisation that has been followed in trying to counteract the semi-traitorous conduct of John L. Lewis.

Any government must reserve for itself a wide margin of flexibility in meeting new problems as they arise. But if a general policy has been established to serve as a guide in dealing with specific issues, the number of crises arising is likely to be fewer; satisfactory settlements are likely to come easier and to follow a more consistent pattern. In short, basic planning is desirable in fixing the relations between government and labor as well as in our national economic development.

NOW THAT a new crisis has made further resort to expediency necessary, the Government will have to take over the mines and operate them once more. But it must be apparent to everyone that that is a poor substitute for a policy of encouraging within labor organizations the sense of responsibility that should go with their enormously increased powers. At present many union officials are accountable to no one. They may employ tyrannical methods, misuse union funds and establish employment monopolies even while they are receiving aid and protection from their Government. In spite of the war, we are maintaining a negative policy of complete laissez faire toward the most powerful economic groups in the country.

This lack of any code of fair conduct for labor gives unscrupulous elements a chance to play fast and loose with our national safety and thus bring contempt upon organized workers in general. It encourages precisely the type of anarchy that Mr. Lewis has inflicted on the mines. What is probably even worse, this lack of a basic labor policy tends to leave the rank and file without a sense of duty or responsibility. They have been given no standard by which to measure their conduct in relation to either their employer or the Government. When little dictators run amuck or when self-restraints break down under these circumstances, the Government's policymakers in the field of labor certainly cannot be held blameless.

Bissell Made Assistant Chief Of Air Staff for Intelligence

Maj. Gen. Clayton L. Bissell, former commanding general of the Tenth Air Force in India, has been appointed assistant chief of air staff for intelligence, the War Department announced yesterday.

He succeeds Brig. Gen. Edgar P. Sorgenson, whose new assignment was not disclosed.

Bissell commanded the Tenth Air Force for a year prior to his return to this country in August and the Distinguished Service Medal for his work in India was awarded to him. Until last December 1, he also commanded all Air Forces troops in Asia, but on that date the forces in China were organized as a separate command, the Fourteenth Air Force, under Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault.

The Army, in a move reflecting the high command's belief that the threat of enemy attack against Western United States has greatly diminished, yesterday separated the Alaskan Defense Command from the Western Defense Command.

Redesignated the Alaskan Department, it will remain under the command of Lieut. Gen. Simon B. Buckner, who has headed the Alaska Defense Command since July 22, 1940. During most of that time the Alaska Defense Command was part of Lieut. Gen. John L. De Witt's Western Defense Command.

De Witt also headed the Fourth Army, but the Army and defense commands were separated when De Witt was named commandant of the Joint Army-Navy Staff College in Washington, D. C., this summer. Lieut. Gen. Delos C. Emmons, air officer who formerly was Army commander in Hawaii, succeeded De Witt as head of the Western Defense Command.

Strikers Traitors, Gossett Says; Truman Urges Rail Pay Rise

By the Associated Press

Commenting on threats of strikes involving railroad workers, Representative Gossett (Democrat) of Texas told the House yesterday anyone who "wilfully strikes is a traitor to his country" and is "insulting every man in uniform."

Gossett's one-minute speech drew bursts of applause.

On the other side of the Capitol, however, Senator Truman (Democrat) of Missouri introduced a joint resolution to put Congress on record as favoring an 8 cents an hour pay increase for 1,097,180 railroad workers.

The Truman proposal, sent to the Interstate Commerce Committee for consideration, would urge that an agreement reached last August 17 for an 8-cent increase for nonoperating personnel, be put into effect, retroactive to February 1 last. The agreement has not become operative because of its rejection by Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson. The unions involved have authorized a strike vote on the issue.

5000 Leave Jobs

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 1 (AP).—Production of airplane propellers for the armed services was halted at two Nash-Kelvinator company plants here today for the second time in less than a week when upward of 5000 men walked off the job.

The walkout started with one shift in the Hount Hope plant at 2 a. m. and spread to other shifts and the other factory until the final shutdown at 9:30 a. m. Production was reported to be at a standstill.

Police were called to the plant gates at 7 a. m. and said two automobiles were blocking the gates. Lieut. Victor P. Scavarda of the police department said pickets were patrolling the gates.

A statement issued by John Haruska, president of local 13, United Automobile Workers (CIO), asserted "there has been no strike vote taken by the workers in these plants. There has been no picket lines and there wont's be any."

Company Accused

Haruska said "firings, layoffs and total disregard for existing working agreements" were at the bottom of the dispute.

Workers struck last week in a dispute over management's disciplinary actions. At that time, the plants were shut down for upward of 24 hours.

A company spokesman charged union officials with taking what he called "unwarranted steps" in seeking to have the Government take over the plants.

"It may or not be a strike," the company official said, "but the fact remains that both plants are open. If they are not producing, it's because the men are refusing to work, and the responsibility for this situation must be assumed by the union."

Children Delay Greenbelt Drains

Considerable damage to equipment and delay in the work of installing new drains in Greenbelt have been caused by children, it was revealed in an open letter sent to all residents of Greenbelt by James T. Gobbel, newly appointed community manager.

Manager Gobbel has been advised by the contractors that pipes have been broken, parts of steel forms removed and newly dug ditches filled.

Allied Armies Fail To Find Larry Allen

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Nov. 1 (AP).—Allied armies in Italy have found no trace of Larry Allen, Associated Press correspondent captured at Tobruk by the Italians, September 13, 1942, who was reported last night to have arrived in southern Italy after escaping from a German prison camp. All indications were the report was incorrect.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

And now comes up Army vs. Notre Dame on Saturday at Yankee Stadium and in this one the T formation is a certain winner, barring a tie. A tie, incidentally, would stand for some kind of a triumph for Army, which is supposed to take a beating from Notre Dame and probably will.

POVICH

The T-formation is offensive football in high gear and both the Irish and West Point are late recruits to its ranks, but what is brewed when T meets T is something for the human element to decide. In this case, Notre Dame seems to have the bigger, the faster, perhaps the smarter and by no means the milder humans.

What Notre Dame won't have is Angelo Bertelli to throw its passes and direct the hocus-pocus behind the line in the Notre Dame attack from his sinister crouch behind center, and no team loses a Bertelli without being hurt. His loss is fodder enough for Notre Dame Coach Frank Leahy, already a distinguished moaner, to go into a wailing session without parallel.

Bertelli meant to Notre Dame exactly what Sammy Baugh means to the Redskins. He need only to fake a pass to panic and scatter the defenses of the enemy and then take his choice of throwing it or handing the ball over to one of the backs who came exploding out of the magic of the T.

But nobody can accuse the Irish of being a one-man football team. They can do very well without Bertelli, although of course he helps. Leahy has rounded up a set of running backs that rivals anything Rockne ever had at South Bend in any one season, with due recognition extended to the Cariedo-Savoldi-Schwartz-Brill backfield of 1929-30.

If Johnny Lujack, Bertelli's understudy, does not approach Bertelli's passing success or give the Irish quite the same direction, then Notre Dame's running backs, left to their own devices, will probably do all right against Army. They operate behind a great line that wore down a good Navy line last weekend at Cleveland, and Army's strength is supposed to lie in its backfield, not its line.

The Notre Dame backs are a downright ferocious crew, with Creighton Miller the breakaway runner; Jim Mello, the heavy duty man; Julie Rykovich, a handy guy whether he's running from scrimmage or grabbing a pass. Every one of them has that valuable commodity, leg drive. Navy had them stopped on the line of scrimmage innumerable times, but not for keeps. They seemed to come from the same mold, twisting, fighting bulls with speed.

That big Notre Dame line which held Navy to a total of minus 7 yards rushing despite the fact that Leahy's system called for a five-man line against the Middies' passing attempts, can probably handle Army's line. It's probable, though, that they'll meet up with a better set of backs against West Point, notably Glenn Davis.

Army's 13-13 tie with Penn could be discarded from consideration, as perhaps it should be, what with a wet field undoubtedly upsetting the precision of Army's T-formation, but Army will encounter in the Irish a team of ballhawks. Hamberg completed only 12 of his 38 passing attempts against the Irish on a dry field, and there were five interceptions.

With Bertelli handling the ball on every play by Notre Dame, his passing was always a threat, but the Irish gained something like 380 yards rushing against Navy, which illustrates the power, too, of the Irish ball carirers, operating behind that line. Leahy has plentiful replacements everywhere, apparently. Army scouts at Cleveland must have brought back glowing reports of Vic Klubitski, a second string back, who looked as if he belonged on the first team.

Hughie Devore, a Notre Dame end coach, unwittingly got off the best pregame line the day before the game in Cleveland. He was en route to scout the Penn-Army game when he made a speech to the Cleveland Touchdown Club in which he got his words slightly mixed up. He was describing the fierce Navy line play the Irish would encounter on the morrow when he said, "Navy has two lines, equal to none." He meant second to none, but as it turned out the Irish made him look pretty good, anyway.

There will be no surprise if Notre Dame runs up no great score against Army, because Army-Irish games are traditionally close, but so were Navy-Notre Dame games until last Saturday when Navy took its worst beating of the series. There's really no telling how many touchdowns this Notre Dame team could score, even without Bertelli.

Majors Draft 15 Players From Minors

Chicago, Nov. 1 (AP).—Major league baseball men sat in on a quiet draft session at Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis' office today, those from eight clubs intoning "pass" each time their teams' names were called and the remaining eight dipping into the grab bag for 15 players, 5 less than were taken last year.

The New York Giants, who finished a dismal last in the National League last season, stayed at the selection business until they had four players in the fold—their own former First Baseman Phil Weintraub, two second basemen and a pitcher. The Giants had first pick because the Philadelphia A's, entitled to that position, were not represented.

Weintraub, who hit .334 and 16 home runs for Toledo of the American Association last season, was considered one of the choicest items on the block and was taken by the Giants on their first turn.

Hausmann No. 2 Selection

The No. 2 selection was Clem Hausmann, who won 14 games and lost 14 pitching for Kansas City, which finished in a last-place tie in the American Association, and the Boston Red Sox called his name. Third choice was Charles Chanz, San Diego pitcher, taken by the Philadelphia Phils.

In order the St. Louis Browns claimed Henry Helf, Milwaukee catcher with a .261 batting average and nine home runs to his credit in 1943; the Boston Braves grabbed Chet Wieczorek, hard-hitting Columbus Red Bird outfielder who hit .328; Detroit took Eddie Mayo, Louisville third sacker who spent much of the 1943 season with the Philadelphia A's and hit only .219; the Chicago White Sox bid for Edwin Carnett, .321-hitting outfielder from Seattle, and the Brooklyn Dodgers drafted Gil English, Indianapolis third baseman who hit .322.

The eight other teams, including the world champion New York Yankees and their World Series foes, the St. Louis Cardinals, did not participate.

Giants Took Three More

Subsequently the Giants took three more players—Hugh Luby, Oakland second baseman; George Hausma, New Orleans second sacker, and Ewal Pyle, Minneapolis pitcher who was with Washington part of the 1943 season.

The Phillies passed on second round but the third time took Charles Letchas, Toronto second baseman. The Boston Braves called for Pitcher Ira Hutchinson of Rochester, Detroit added Joe Orange, St. Paul shortestop, and the White Sox claimed Pitcher Al Epperly of San Francisco, who won 16 and 5.

The emphasis was on infielders and pitchers. Five hurlers were chosen, one first baseman, three second basemen, two third basemen and one shortstop, Wieczorek and Capnett were the only outfielders drafted and Helf the lone catcher.

The number of players chosen was below the average of 20 which has held up for the last dozen or so years.

Nats Unable to Get Only Minor Choice

The Nats attempted to draft only only one minor league player, Clark Griffith declared. He was John Wyrostek, an outfielder with Columbus of the American Association. Wyrostek had a tryout with the Pirates last season.

"We didn't expect that we would be able to claim Wyrostek," said Griffith. "By virtue of finishing second last season, the Washington Club had thirteenth choice among the 16 big league teams and that put us too far down the list."

As Garner Told Boxing Commission He "Threw" Fight

Boxer Admits Taking Cash In Fight 'Fix'

By Al Costello

John Garner was suspended indefinitely and Promoter Joe Turner, John Carter, manager of Tee Hubert, and Walter Johnson and John Sullivan, co-managers of Garner, suspended for 30 days each last night by the District Boxing Commission for their parts in the fight between Garner and Hubert last Oct. 18 at Turner's Arena, which Garner claims he "threw" to Hubert.

Garner, who appeared before the commission in person yesterday after submitting a written confession to that body last week, candidly admitted a "dive" to Hubert and named Carter as the man who paid him $300 to do so. His indefinite suspension means that in all probability he never will fight again.

Turner, Carter, Sullivan and Johnson were suspended not because the commission felt they knew beforehand or had any hand in Garner's "dive," but because they entered into a private agreement on weights and forfeits of $300 without sanction of the boxing commission. Rules of the commission forbid promoters, managers or fighters from entering agreements except when they are filed with the ring body.

Four-Hour Hearing

The boxing commission, composed of Chairman Claude W. Owen, Thomas P. Morgan, jr., and Police Inspector Clarence W. Talley, heard Garner's testimony yesterday and cross-examined all concerned for nearly four hours before adjourning until last night, when the decision was reached.

The commission felt, it said in a 500 word statement, that Garner's allegation he took a dive was not substantiated or proven. The ring bosses said Garner not only failed to prove his accusation but left doubt in their minds that the fight really was fixed.

The commission's ruling further means that Carter, Johnson and Sullivan must remain inactive during the period of suspension. It also means that Joe Turner cannot present his weekly Monday night boxing cards during that time.

To Seek New Hearing

Turner last night said he was being made the "goat" and that he would ask the commission for another hearing on his part in the deal. Turner says he did not enter into the agreement, but merely guaranteed Carter he would pay him $300 out of Garner's purse if Garner did not make the required 165 pounds. Turner said he was asked to guarantee Carter the money on the request of Sullivan and Garner.

At the commission hearing yesterday, Garner, dressed in the khaki of Uncle Sam, backed his written confession of a week before to the limit—and then some.

Unruffled but emphatic, the Negro former light-heavyweight and middleweight champion of the District, insisted he was paid $300 by John Carter, Negro restaurateur and manager of Hubert, at Carter's home between 2:30 and 3 a. m., Tuesday, October 19, only a few hours after he had taken the "dive" that everyone seems to doubt.

Garner further said he was supposed to have received another $100 and a share of the betting winnings, but had received only an additional $40. Carter, as he did last Monday when Garner's confession was read, denied all charges and further stated that it was impossible for him to have paid Garner at the time and place indicated by Garner, since he does not leave his place of business until 3 a. m. every morning.

Roommate Testifies

The only vestige of proof Garner could offer was the testimony of Walter Butler, a Negro with whom Garner roomed before entering the Army, October 23. Garner said that after the fight he and Butler attended a party in the 1100 block of Girard st., nw, a block from Carter's residence. At 2:30 a.m., he said he left the party, walked

Middies Look To Penn Game, Forget Irish

Annapolis, Nov. 1 (AP).—The atmosphere of defeat was shortlived at the Naval Academy today following the Saturday football frolic in Cleveland in which the Middies were toppled from the ranks of the unbeaten by Notre Dame.

Navy coaches looked toward the three remaining games for the Tars' 1943 pigskin schedule—Pennsylvania, Columbia and Army—and passed over the 33-6 defeat as "just one of those things."

Penn will enter the Philadelphia stadium this coming weekend against the Middies, undefeated and once-tied—that by Army when the two teams battled up and down a muddy field in the Quaker City to a 13-13 draw.

Navy Regains Full Strength

An encouraging factor for the Navy in completing the remainder of the season without another defeat is that they are back to full strength with the return to practice today of Bob Jenkins, a 190-pound fast running Tar back who had been injured and consequently sidelined for several weeks. Jenkins made a short appearance in the Georgia Tech-Navy fray but he was kept out of this Irish-Middie affair.

The Monday mornink quarterbacks who gathered with Navy's coaching staff to rehash the Cleveland game today admitted Frank Leahy's squad is great, admitted Bert Bertelli, Jim Mello, Creighton Miller and Julius Rykovich played ably for Notre Dame, and admitted that the South Bend linemen are slightly terrific.

But all of them tried to reach the heights of oratory in applauding the work of Little—but oh, my—Hal Hamberg, who tossed some 35 aerials for the Middies and played at least 59 of the 60 minutes in the game to spark the underdog Navy team.

Tar Center Jack Martin also came in for praise from Line Coach Rip Miller, who attributed most of Navy's defense to the smart field work and cruising tackles of the 205-pounder from Toledo, Ohio.

Holds 8 League Pass Marks

Baugh Also Broke Yardage Record Against Brooklyn

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Sammy Baugh boosted his number of National Football League passing records to eight Sunday, including a new one completely overlooked—376 yards gained passing in one game. Baugh's major record-breaking effort against the Dodgers was his six touchdown passes completed.

The previous yardage record in one afternoon was Cecil Isbell's total of 333 on 10 passes against the Chicago Cardinals last year. Davey O'Brien held second place with 316 yards on 33 completed passes against the Redskins here in December of 1940.

Baugh's 376 yards included a 71-yard scoring dash by Wilbur Moore and his total yardage was the result of 16 passes in 28 attempts.

Five All-Time Records

Nearing the halfway mark in his seventh, and what may be his greatest pro football season, Baugh holds five all-time records, two game records and one for a season. Green Bay's famed forward passers, Arnie Herber and Cecil Isbell, who played nine and six seasons, respectively, monopolize the passing records with the Redskin aerial artist.

Sammy will probably break another record, this one in reverse, next week as he has had 81 passes intercepted while Herber's 82 top the list. Baugh is closing in on Isbell's record of 24 touchdown passes in a season, set last year when Don Hutson caught 17. In four games thus far Baugh has clicked for 14 payoff pitches.

Sammy is rolling up the passing records in a season in which he was supposedly handicapped by a lack of competent receivers. Wilbur Moore, Joe Aguirre and Andy Farkas have turned up as perfect partners, however, and Bob Seymour added his name to Baugh's touchdown pass catchers Sunday.

Impressive List of Records

On the other hand, Sammy has been meeting with weaker opposition than past years. In three of the first four games the Redskins have faced teams with combined losing streaks of 12 games. In the only test, the Redskins played super football against the Green Bay Packers.

Baugh's records:

Most passes completed, all time—Baugh at 598 (record). Cecil Isbell second, 419.

Most passes attempted, all time—Baugh, 1084 (record). Arnie Herber second, 1011.

Most yards gained on passes, all time—Baugh, 7436 (record). Arnie Herber second, 6741.

Most yards gained on passes, one game—Baugh, 376 (record). Cecil Isbell second, 333.

Most touchdown passes, all time—Baugh, 70 (record), Cecil Isbell second, 59.

Most touchdown passes, one game—Baugh, 6 (record). Cecil Isbell and Ray Buivid second, 5.

Best passing efficiency, all time—Baugh, 598 out of 1084, 55.1 per cent (record). Cecil Isbell second.

Wilson to Meet Western High In Spot Game

Western High will play Wilson in the spot high school game of the week at Central Stadium at 3 p. m. Saturday, Dallas Shirley, senior high school physical training director, announced last night. Preceding the spot game, at 1:30, the Coolidge and Central junior varsity teams will play.

The spot game choice seems to be an evenly matched one, for Western, in third place, has three victories, two losses, and Wilson, in fourth, has won two games, tied one and lost two. In addition, the schools are arch rivals, for Wilson, a fairly recent comer in the local high school picture, draws on the territory from which used to come many of the Western students.

In the other two interhigh games of the week Coolidge will play at Central and Anacostia will play at Eastern. Both games are scheduled for 4 p. m. Friday. Coolidge, unbeaten in the city so far, is a hands down favorite over Central, which hasn't won a game. Both Eastern and Anacostia are pretty far down the standings list and the outcome seems pretty much of a toss-up, with Eastern a slight favorite.

The Tech Trainers have a plenty tough row to hoe Friday when they meet Washington-Lee Generals, undefeated this year until they bowed to the Colts Friday, but Tech was a vastly improved team last Friday and should provide some competition. Roosevelt, in second place in the high school league, entertains St. John's Friday.

Conway Takes Decision; Nick Latsios Wins

Clint Conway, 178, Fort Monmouth soldier, won a unanimous 10-round decision over Perk Daniels, 202, Chicago defense plant worker, last night at Turner's Arena before 1453 customers who paid a gross of $2181 to see the slow fight.

Conway's left found Daniel's face and body with regularity. Daniels, who defeated Conway last winter, plainly showed the effects of ring rustiness after not having fought since last May.

Nick Latsios, 152½, Alexandria's Golden Greek, now in the Army Air Forces at Bolling Field, chalked up a three-round technical kayo over Joe Sole, 148, Baltimore. Nick had Sole down twice in the second for nine counts and once more for nine in the third. On Sole's fourth trip, Referee Marty Gallagher mercifully stopped it. The end came in 2:37 of the third.

Walter Hafer, 202, a tough Marine stationed here, put Dan Biggers, 187, Baltimore Negro, to sleep in 2:19 of the third round with a smashing right hand after the boys had staged a real slugging match. Herschel Todd, 163, and Edsel Martz, 158½, two local lads, put on another fast bout with Todd taking the decision after six rounds.

Gene Brown, 148, D. C. Negro, pasted Oliver Ham, 145, a tough egg of a soldier from Florida, all over the premises to take an easy-six-round decision. Ham just wouldn't go down under Brown's barrage.

Terp Eleven Is Given Rest

Dr. Clarence W. Spears, University of Maryland football coach, gave his Old Liners a well-deserved rest yesterday following their return from Greenville, S. C., where they defeated the 334th Bomber Group team from the Greenville Army Base Saturday, 43-18.

For the first time this season it appears that Maryland's squad will remain intact and escape further shake-ups occasioned by Selective Service calls.

Spears reported that his players escaped injury in the Greenville game, and he will begin hard workouts today in preparation for the University of Virginia engagement Saturday at Charlottesville.

Cavaliers Work Hard

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—The University of Virginia Cavaliers, spirits boosted by the 34 to 0 victory over VMI today held the stiffest Monday afternoon practice in years to inaugurate preparations for the tilt with the Maryland Old Liners here Saturday.

By using the full roster or thirty-six players in the VMI game Saturday, Coach Frank Murray had his entire squad on the practice field today, none too tired to take full part in the workout. The Cavaliers came through the Cadet contest uninjured.

Grid Writers Fight Pre-Game Army-Irish Battle to Dessert

By Harold Claassen

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Advance forces of the Army and Notre Dame football teams, opponents Saturday in the Yankee Stadium, met today at the weekly luncheon of the New York grid writers—with the "game" ending in a tie.

Maj. Woodrow Wilson, chief of the Army scouts, declared the Irish line as it played against Navy in Cleveland Saturday was the peer of any college forward wall and the equal of many in the pro circuit.

He was of the opinion that the loss of Angelo Bertelli, I-dotting forward passer for the South Bend eleven, was not great because of the ability shown by Johnny Lujack, his replacement. Lujack will take over the quarterback slot against the Cadets, Bertilli moving to a Marines" training camp following the conquest of Navy.

Cadet Tackles Praised

Jack Lavelle, Notre Dame alumnus and scout for the Frank Leahy board of strategy at every Army contest this year, declared that the West Point tackles, Joseph Stanowicz and Francis Merritt, were the best in the land this year and that Casimir Myslinski carried on the tradition of great Cadet centers.

Walter Kennedy, head of the Notre Dame publicity staff, offered in rebuttal that Leahy, coach of the Irish, had said the loss of Bertelli was "comparable to cutting the heart out of a man."

"Lujack isn't entirely inexperienced," Kennedy added, "but you will notice that he was a replacement for Creighton Miller at halfback more than he was for Bertilli at quarter." He described the 18-year-old youth as a "good passer, a good runner and a defensive standout."

Leahy Quoted

He quoted Leahy in answer to the statement of Major Wilson that Notre Dame wasn't worried about Bertelli's leaving, "otherwise they would have taken Angelo out of the Navy game when Notre Dame got a two-touchdown lead and discovered what the kid could do. Instead, Leahy kept Bertelli in there and let Lujack sit on the bench."

Quentin Reynolds, war correspondent and a star lineman at Brown University in the early 1920s, brought an end to the Army-Notre Dame controversy by asking "as a former tackle" if the T-formation, which both of Saturday's rivals use this season, could be run without holding by the offensive lineman.

Steve Owens, coach of the New York Giants of the National Football League, agreed that it could, especially if the referee countenanced the "cloth block."

Father Flanagan, Boys Town Team Arrive Here Today

Father E. J. Flanagan, founder and sponsor of Boys Town, Nebr., will arrive here today to lend his support to the benefit football game between the 22-man Boys Town squad and Gonzaga at Griffith Stadium at 2 p. m. Sunday.

Coach Maurice (Skip) Palrang and the Boys Town squad will arrive at Union Station this afternoon.

At 12:30 p. m. today a capacity audience will be present when Father Flanagan officially opens his local visit by addressing the weekly luncheon of the Touchdown Club. The Touchdowners have pledged support to Sunday's game, and have arranged a special welcome for Father Flanagan.

At 3 p. m. Father Flanagan will visit Walter Reed Hospital, where he is to meet Gen. John J. Pershing, Commander in Chief of the American Expeditionary Forces in World War I, and also will confer with some of the wounded.

Wrestling Line-up At Arena Changed

One change was made yesterday in the line-up for tomorrow night's all-star wrestling cavalcade at Turner's Arena.

Michele Leone, the Italian title claimant, scheduled to meet Dr. John Bonikaka, the wrestling medico from Boston, is off the card due to an infected arm. He will be replaced by Dick Lever, the hard-hitting Salt Lake City grappler.

Rickey's Home Destroyed by Fire

St. Louis, Nov. 1 (AP).—The elaborate country home of Branch Rickey, president and general manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers baseball club, was destroyed by fire this afternoon. Neighbors saved most of the furnishings, including an organ and a grand piano.

The blaze was discovered by Mrs. Mary Eckler, Rickey's daughter, who said the fire apparently started from a fireplace, where she was burning papers preparatory to moving to New York. She said the house and its contents were valued at more than $50,000.

4 Teams Lose Perfect Records

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Army, Navy, Pennsylvania and Tulsa were knocked out of football's perfect group of unbeaten and untied teams last week. Notre Dame and Purdue continue to top the list, now reduced to 15 teams.

Records of the undefeated, untied teams (three games or more):

Team.	G.	Pts.	OP.
Purdue	7	193	48
Notre Dame	6	261	31
Iowa Seahawks	6	158	52
Southern California	6	93	0
Randolph Field (Tex.)	6	163	9
Franklin-Marshall	5	97	24
Colorado College	5	129	27
Cape Girardeau (Mo.) Trs.	5	118	7
Bainbridge (Md.) Naval	5	213	7
Bunker Hill (Ind.) Naval	5	115	37

Washington	4	150	32
Drake	4	110	32
Arkansas Aggies	4	152	12
Pittsburgh (Kans.) Trs.	3	86	7

Barons Trade Robertson To Pittsburgh Hornets

Cleveland, Nov. 1 (AP).—The Cleveland Barons of the American Hockey League today traded Defenseman Freddie Robertson to the Pittsburgh Hornets for Defenseman Pete Bessone in a straight player deal, Baron President Al Sutphin announced.

Bainbridge Navy's Sossamon Injured

Bainbridge, Md., Nov. 1 (AP).—Lou Sossamon, first-string center on the Bainbridge Naval Training Station football team, was hospitalized today for treatment of a leg injury received in yesterday's 72-0 defeat of the Philadelphia Yellowjackets.

Commodore Coach Joe Maniaci said that X-rays would be taken to determine the extent of injury to the former All-America player.

Andy Farkas Sets All-Time Scoring Record

When Redskin Andy Farkas caught Sammy Baugh's sixth touchdown pass Sunday against the Brooklyn Dodgers and helped Baugh to his new league record, Farkas was setting up a record of his own. A few minutes later Farkas scored his second touchdown of the day and passed Cliff Battles as the Redskins' leading scorer of all time.

In six years with the 'Skins, including this season, Farkas has scored 31 touchdowns and booted five extra points for a total of 192, while in six full years as a Redskin halfback, in which he built a reputation as one of the greatest backs in pro football history, Battles accounted for 31 touchdowns and kicked one extra point for 187.

Farkas has scored five touchdowns in four games this season, topping the pace of his sophomore league with the Redskins when he set a league record of 11 touchdowns. Don Hutson and George McAfee have since broken that record. Hutson holds the existing mark with 17.

Andy's 192-point total actually covers only four full playing seasons, plus the present one, as in 1941 he underwent a knee operation on the way back from the Redskins' West Coast training camp and played only 1 minute of the next-to-last game and 5 minutes of the final.

Farkas came to the Redskins as the Nation's leading scorer in 1937 with Detroit University, a year in which he raced to three touchdowns against Catholic University in Griffith Stadium, all of more than 50 yards.

Included in Farkas' 31 touchdowns, in league competition only, was one which holds the record for the longest completed pass. In 1939 the Redskins and Pittsburgh Steelers were tied in the third quarter with the Redskins in possession on their own 1-yard line. Frank Filchock stepped back into the end zone, flipped a short pass over the head of the charging Steelers and Farkas grabbed the ball and ran 99 yards for a touchdown.

Andy recalls the record dash as the most memorable touchdown of his pro career, with last year's 97-yard runback of a kickoff in the New York Giant game in the Polo Grounds as runner-up.

Redskin Capt. Bob Masterson is the only other active player with more than 100 points. Another six-year man, Masterson has scored nine touchdowns, 59 points-after-touchdown and seven field goals for 134 points.

Camp Holabird Bows to Lions, 13-6

"Jelli" Pinckney's Washington Lions defeated the Camp Holabird eleven, piloted by "Reds" Briscoe, 13-6, last night at Griffith Stadium before 2,000. Charlie (Buck) Perry and Howard Banks accounted for the Lions' scoring. The soldiers scored early in the game when Patterson fumbled a punt and Dan White recovered and scampered 10 yards.

Knight's Quest Wins Steeplechase Handicap at Pimlico

Sharp Entry Length Victor In Battleship

By Walter Haight

Pimlico, Nov. 1.—Fencing faultlessly and escaping trouble that cost him chances in two other events here, Lieut. Bayard Sharp's Knight's Quest came into his own today with a length victory in the sixth running of the Battleship Steeplechase Handicap, named for the American winner of the Grand National.

With Jockey Willie Passmore aboard, Knight's Quest led Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark's Invader to the finish line. In third position and a neck off the place horse came W. H. Lipscomb's Mercator, the favorite.

Mercator was made the favorite by the crowd of $12,000 and backers of Knight's Quest received $22.50 for each $2 investment. The winner, well handled by Jockey Willie Passmore, was clocked in 3:57 1-5 for the 2 miles and 15 fences.

The victory was worth $5,220 to the winner. Four scratches reduced the field to ten starters.

Mercator Early Leader

Mercator, ridden by Jockey H. W. Clements who is on furlough from the Army, set the early pace but ran wide at every turn. Each time Mercator bore out, Knight's Quest was right there to save ground and take a brief lead. In the final stages, Knight's Quest shook off Mercator and was under vigorous handling on the final flat to withhtand the closing rush of Invader.

The two best flat offerings of the afternoon went to Greentree Stable's Croydon and Woolford Farm's Pig Tails. Croydon, conspicuous by his lack of running in his last four races, was a stretch powerhouse today under Eddie (Bear Out) Arcaro. Pig Tails, who almost knocked down the outside fence in her start, was able to get up in the final strides in her sprint.

Jockey Nick Wall Injured

Jockey Nick Wall suffered a sprained ankle in the seventh race. He was aboard John A. Manfuso's Ascertain and struck the gate at the start. Ascertain was third after being caught between horses in the final stages. Jockey Nick Jemas rode J. L. Moore's Suntegra up on the outside to take the purse by a nose from G. C. Greer's Miss Gosling.

Jockey Eddie Arcaro's ride on Shut Out, when he carried Slide Rule out, is the main subject of discussion here . . . One horseman said, "By not disqualifying Shut Out, the stewards gave an open invitation to all jockeys to do as they please in any stake race" . . . Commenting on the fact that the Greentree Stable colors did not come down, somebody remarked, 'Would they disqualify MacArthur?" . . . It is getting a little sickening to keep watching the bungling rides of Jockey Nick Jemas, particularly aboard those heavy-played favorites . . . Peg Hanna is busy claiming horses for the O'Sullivan Farms . . . He took Winged Tip and Cobeggo yesterday . . . The Funkhouser dough from up Charles Town way is behind that rubber heel stable . . . Two track record holders will perform at Marlboro . . . They are Hiblaze (5½ furlongs in 1:07 1-5) and Officiate (1 3-16 miles) in 2:06 2-5). These records probably will go by the boards because Marlboro is going to draw much better horses this time . . . Platter, third in the Belmont Futurity, goes in the Pimlico Futurity on Wednesday in the Widener colors . . . The Charles S. (Seabiscuit) Howards arrived from the West Coast to see the action here . . . Thumbs Up was shipped to New York but may be back for the Riggs Handicap.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CORYDON, $8.00, $3.80, $2.70; HE ROLLS, $2.70, $2.30; RONCAT, $3.10.
CORYDON, showing sudden improvement, was allowed to settle into stride, came out, responded when placed to pressure and was up in concluding strides. HE ROLLS was in thick of forward contention from start, moved with RONCAT to the front in stretch and fought it out with good energy. RONCAT saved ground while improving position, came gamely under good handling and held on willingly.

FIFTH RACE—Two miles. Purse, 5000 added. For 3-year-olds and upward. The Battleship Steeplechase Handicap. 15 jumps. Start poor. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:05½. Off at 2:05½. Winner, Lieut. Bayard Sharp's br. g. (5) by Sir Gallahad III—Escadrille. Trained by L. Sessa. Value to winner, $5220; second, $1000; third, $500; fourth, $250. Time, 3:57⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KNIGHT'S QUEST, $22.60, $10.20, $6.20; INVADER, $14.20, $6.10; MERCATOR, $2.60.
KNIGHT'S QUEST alternated in setting and pressing pace with MERCATOR, took command in late stages and held on gamely on final flat run. INVADER improved position gradually and came gamely in final test. MERCATOR ran wide into turns, made bad landing at fifth and closed gamely. BANK NOTE raced evenly. BAVARIAN had speed in spots.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $2500. For 3-year-olds and upward; fillies and mares. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:36. Off at 2:37½. Winner, Woolford Farm's br. f. (4) by Hollyrood—Mammys Girl. Trained by R. O. Higdon. Value to winner, $1630; second, $500; third, $250; fourth, $100. Time, 1:13.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUNTEGRA, $17.70, $8.00, $4.30; MISS GOSLING, $4.20, $3.20; ASCERTAIN, $4.40.
SUNTEGRA, off alertly but unable to keep up early, was taken to outside in stretch run and closed gamely to get camera decision. MISS GOSLING set pace under rating and accompanied by ASCERTAIN, was partially impeded when ASCERTAIN lugged in, recovered and closed boldly in close quarters. ASCERTAIN forced pace of MISS GOSLING, took brief lead while lugging in midstretch and was squeezed back approaching finish.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1200. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:41. Off at 3:42. Winner, W. W. Waters' b. g. Dorazio Opens Workouts for Hart Today

"Dynamite Gus" Dorazio, Philadelphia's spoiler among the heavyweights, reports here 24 hours behind schedule today to open final workouts for his 12-round return bout with Soldier Al Hart on the Liberty Athletic Club's boxing Show at Uline Arena Friday night.

This afternoon at the Liberty Athletic Club's gymnasium, 419 9th st. nw., Dorazio will step out in a public drill. He will close hard training at the Liberty gymnasium tomorrow afternoon, since he is to merely loosen up Thursday.

Ahearn, meanwhile, rounded out his supporting card for Friday night yesterday when he booked in four bouts of five rounds each. Sailor Eddie White, who knocked out Danny Biggers here recently, faces Soldier Otis Harris in a heavyweight bout. Big fellows also will mingle when George Kostalac, 240-pound pachyderm from Harrisburg, Pa., faces 230-pound Abner Powell, former international amateur heavyweight champion and now a Negro military policeman at Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Md.

Five Suspended In Garner Probe

the block to Carter's residence and collected the $300. He gave $100 to Butler. Butler verified the statement, telling the commission he reminded Garner of his appointment and that when Garner returned he had the $300 in his possession in $100 bills. He readily admitted taking the $100 for himself and another $100 which he held for the fighter, doling it out in small amounts at various times.

Carter admitted that Garner came to his house, but at a later hour than 2:30 a.m. and that he refused Garner entrance, keeping the door chain in place during the entire conversation. Carter said Garner asked for the $300 forfeit which Promoter Joe Turner had put up for him to make 165 pounds for the fight and which Turner subsequently deducted from Garner's purse and turned over to Carter as per their private agreement. Carter said he refused to return the money to Garner and the fighter departed.

Menendez Seeking Promoter's License

Gabe Menendez, who served as promoted Joe Turner's matchmaker for two years before entering the Army some 20 months ago, today will apply to the District Boxing Commission for a promoter's license, he announced last night.

Menendez, honorably discharged from the Army last month, said he would us Turner's Arena as his base of operations if given the license. Notified of Turner's suspension, Menendez said he hoped to start promoting next Monday, inasmuch as Turner would be idle. Menendez said he and Turner already had reached an agreement on renting the arena.

Ohio State Won't See Indiana Game Movies

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 1 (AP).—Misfortune upset normal practice routine for Ohio State's Buckeyes today as they prepared for Saturday's clash with the Pitt Panthers at Pittsburgh. Movies of last Saturday's 20-14 defeat by Indiana were lost in transit to Detroit for processing, so the team began experimenting with defensive formations for use against the Panthers instead of making its customary Monday study of films.

Superduper Turkey Ready For Holidays

By Walter Wood

Thirty days has November, but there are only 24 left for some turkeys.

On the other hand, some will live longer and may even die of old age. Those will be the "superbirds," which, judging from a description of them by the Food Distribution Administration, might require a better man than any left on the homefront to prepare them for Thanksgiving dinner.

In fact, it is not hard to picture one of these superbirds chasing papa, or the 4-F man of the house, instead of being pursued and submitting to the ax like an ordinary turkey.

Superduper Turkey

This superduper, said the FDA, is a chesty, 40, 50 and sometimes a 60-pounder. A comparatively new breed, it is known to growers as the broad-breasted turkey, a quickly maturing creature. It is the offspring of specially selected birds, whose characteristics it intensifies, the FDA said.

The breed expanded rapidly and takes its place this year as a war food. Many are grown in the Midwest and some in the East, the FDA said.

As for other turkeys, they did well this year, too, despite the dry summer and cold spring, FDA said. Growers produced 480 million pounds of turkey, enough for each American to have more than 3 pounds.

Birds Are Plentiful

Although the Army took a large slice out of the early market, plenty of turkeys now are available. More than 50 per cent of the total production is expected on the market by the end of this week. Nine million pounds were in storage October 1, the FDA said, which was one million pounds more than at the same date last year.

The Army took 30 to 35 million pounds of turkey for its use and is sending 10 to 15 million pounds of it overseas for Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's Day dinners, FDA said.

FDA figures on chicken and turkey production for 1943 show an average of 32.6 pounds per capita, against 25.7 in 1942.

OPA Ceiling Prices

As for giving them the ax, most persons planning turkey dinners are expected to pay the difference between prices on live and processed birds to get one that is ready for the oven.

For your information, here are some of the OPA ceilings, per pound, for young birds:

Live, light weight, 36 cents; dressed, 44 cents.

Live, medium, 34½ cents; dressed, 42 cents.

Policemen Cited For Solution of Robinson Slaying

Twelve members of the police force have received special commendation from the District Commissioners for quick solution of the killing of Mrs. Charlotte W. Robinson and the commendation will be made part of their records, it was learned yesterday.

Those cited were Maj. Edward J. Kelly, Inspector Robert J. Barrett, Capt. Clyde S. Strange, Acting Lieut. Jeremiah S. Flaherty and the following detective sergeants: Bernard D. Crooks, Walter D. Perry, John K. Baker, Horace E. Caranfa, Richard J. Felber, David G. Ennis, Eugene E. Thompson and John W. Wise.

Announcing the commendation, Commissioner John Russell Young pronounced the solution "an exceptionally good piece of police work" which "deserves the praise of the whole community."

Court Dismisses Disbarment Case Against Aurelio

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—A four-judge court dismissed today disbarment charges against Thomas A. Aurelio, and confirmed a referee's report that Aurelio did not know the man described as aiding him to obtain a State Supreme Court nomination was "of bad character, an associate of malefactors."

The effect of the decision was to leave the next step in Aurelio's candidacy for a 14-year term on the bench at an annual salary of $22,500 to the 750,000 registered voters of Manhattan and the Bronx in tomorrow's election.

District Attorney Frank S. Hogan had charged Aurelio's nomination by Democratic leaders was brought about by Frank Costello, whom Hogan described as a slot machine racketeer.

DYNAFUEL

is Sunoco's great contribution to United Nations' mastery of the skies

50% more powerful than U. S. standard 100-octane test fuel

It's not by chance that United Nations' fliers have won such complete mastery of the air. Our men are better trained—their planes are better armed—aiming devices and bombsights are unexcelled.

But another factor of tremendous importance is the fighting fuel that powers our planes. Every week, millions of gallons of high-octane aviation fuel flow from Sunoco refineries to the battlefronts of the world.

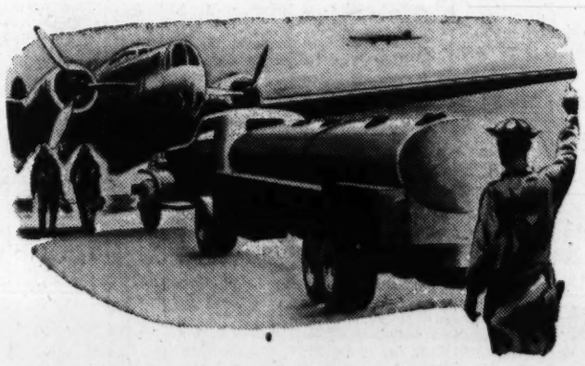
The high quality as well as the huge quantity of our output has been made possible largely by Dynafuel—an exclusive development of Sunoco engineers and chemists.

What is Dynafuel?

Dynafuel is more than a gasoline. It is a super aviation fuel concentrate, made entirely from petroleum and specially processed in order to produce the greatest possible power.

What Makes Dynafuel so Powerful?

It contains a larger percentage of certain ingredients which have extraordinary power-producing qualities. That is why Dynafuel tests 50% higher in power than U. S. standard 100-octane test fuel.



Do Our Fighters and Bombers Fly on Pure Dynafuel?

No—Sunoco Dynafuel is never used undiluted but is blended with gasolines that are produced by other methods, in order to step up their quality.

Thereby, Dynafuel also helps make available greater quantities of aviation fuel that meets highest military specifications—the high-octane fuel which enables the fighters and bombers of the United Nations to fly faster, range farther, climb higher than ever before, and to carry heavier loads of bombs.

Is Dynafuel Being Produced in Large Quantities Now?

Yes—the Dynafuel Process is an important factor in Sunoco's huge production of 100-octane aviation fuel; it utilizes even those portions of the crude which formerly went only into low-grade fuels.

Will Dynafuel Be Available for Automobiles?

Right now, every drop of Dynafuel is reserved for military use. But when peace comes, the same processes and equipment which have contributed so greatly to the war will bring to motorists a new, more powerful fuel for their automobiles.

Dynafuel was developed by Sunoco without government aid or subsidy. The company risked its own capital, its own credit, in order to pay the huge costs of building the plants for its production.

It is through such free play of private initiative that all American progress has been achieved.

Full Retirement Credit For Service Folk Proposed

Chairman Downey of the Senate Civil Service Committee, has introduced a bill which would give the half a million Federal workers in the armed services a break. His measure would give Givernment employes full retirement credit for all the time they spend in the military. That would mean (1) that time spent in the armed services would be counted toward retirement, and (2) Uncle Sam would pay up their retirement accounts in full. The bill would benefit all Federal workers who have and are serving in the military, war service as well as permanents. The Administration will unquestionably get behind the Downey bill as the President has already suggested that Uncle Sam pay up the Social Security accounts of private employes in the armed forces.

KLUTTZ

Chester Bowles, OPA boss, and Paul Porter, assistant to Fred Vinson, the economic stabilizer, were having a discussion on price changes.

"By the way, Chet," asked Porter, "when are you going to issue that order freezing the price on so-and-so article?"

"Currently," replied Bowles, "currently."

"Currently," replied Porter in a quizzical tone, "do you mean currently like a rabbit or currently like a geologist?"

President Roosevelt yesterday stepped into a fight with Congress over food subsidies. Some people believe it'll be a bitter fight with all sorts of political implications. But an undercover survey shows that only members of Congress view it as a big political issue. Sixty per cent of the people questioned didn't know what subsidies were all about and a third of them thought the questioners were talking about some sort of subsoil drainage program to help out the farmers and they favored it. . . . Dr. William A. Hooker, Agriculture's senior economic zoologist, has been retired after 40 years in the service. . . . Maj. James C. Palmer is the new adjutant of the War Department's Office of Dependency Benefits at Newark, N. J. He tlives at Fairfax, Va., and he was a civilian employe at Veterans' before he was commissioned.

The powerful Texas congressional delegation is hopping mad at Economic Czar Fred Vinson. Vinson first got the Texans sore when he placed a ceiling on live cattle below what they had asked. And Saturday he denied the oil producers a 35-cent-a-barrel increase on their oil. Now the Texans are roaring mad . . . Robert Smith, Labor's personnel director, has urged Labor Department employes to ask their relatives, friends or acquaintances if they'd be interested in a full or part-time job in the department. Part-time workers will be hired to work up to 36 hours a week and it can be arranged for them to work one or two full days a week or several hours up to six days a week. Call at Room 1122 or on extension 224 for further information.

United Federal Workers of America appears to have the goods on several overzealous Civil Service investigators who have been asking improper questions of Federal workers. The union presented four specific cases to the commission, and in three of them, the commission admits, the charges are "well founded." The commission says it will take "appropriate disciplinary action," as its instructions were violated. According to union officials, they were told that under no circumstances were investigators to ask questions concerning union activity, racial tolerance, sympathy for the Spanish Loyalists, membership in the Bookshop and religious matters. UFWA representatives urged the commission to order its investigators to stop all questions concerning membership in Communist "front" organizations. The commission refused.

Mark Taylor, supervisory examiner, has been transferred from the Richmond office to assist Patent Commissioner Conway Coe. Taylor headed the employe committee that arranged for the move to Richmond and his detail back here immediately set off rumors that the office was to be moved back. Sorry, there's nothing to it. . . . Another phony moving rumor is that Office of Economic Warfare will be transferred to New York. What's really happening is that Foreign Economic Administration is looking for a building here into which it can move all its activities. Pending that, there will be much moving between agencies. For example, the export divisions of OEW and Lend-Lease will be put together and the relief work of OFRA, OFEC and OEW will be put together to put a stop to all the running around between the 11 different buildings.

War Shipping is in need of 25 stenographers . . . Mattie B. King of the Patent Office manuscript division celebrated 50 years of service on her job yesterday . . . The Printing Pressmen's Union has gone on record against placing GPO employes under the Classification Act . . . Ken Howry, editor of War Times will report to the Army this week at Fort Dix . . . If you live in Virginia you can be excused for a couple of hours today to vote.

Gallinger Probe Hit By La Roe

Speaking to the Dupont Circle Citizens Association in a meeting at the Mayflower Hotel last night, Wilbur La Roe, jr., chairman of the civic affairs committee of the Federation of Churches, cited what he called the "unfairness" of the Gallinger Hospital probe as another example of the need for suffrage in the District.

"The Gallinger investigation was not conducted on a judicial basis," La Roe charged. "The type of witnesses called did not give the public confidence in the inquiry. As is so often the case when judge becomes prosecutor, important evidence was ignored and unfair emphasis dramatically placed on the unimportant, thus coloring the facts in a manner that does not appeal to fair-minded people. This is more serious because of the resulting recommendation that four District officials be dismissed who on the whole have served honorably and well."

La Roe's speech and a mock "trial" in which he played the role of an attorney and questioned a Gallinger chaplain on conditions at the hospital were followed by the Dupont Association voicing a vote of confidence in management of the hospital.

The chaplain, duly sworn, was the Rev. Joseph L. Schantz, who said his experience in institutions before coming to Gallinger consisted of six months in a mental hospital and three months in a penal institution.

The Rev. Mr. Schantz declared that the morale of the hospital's personnel and patients was excellent. The lower brackets of the personnel have become shaken in a few cases by the "unfairness" of the probe and morale lowered in their cases, he said. He also said the pride of some of the student nurses had been hurt. The food, he said, was not miserable but there have been complaints about it.

"But you hear complaints about food in every sort of institution," he said. "I heard them in a private college."

In discussing suffrage for District residents, La Roe said he felt that emphasis should not be put on a desire to take over District management from Congress and the people of the Nation, but on the fact that Washingtonians should have representation in Congress, the right to vote—and also some voice in local government.

Manor Park

John H. Connaughton was indorsed last night by the Manor Park Citizens Association for the vacant post of people's counsel. Connaughton is on the Public Utilities Committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations.

A letter was ordered sent to Dr. Frank W. Ballou, resigned superintendent of schools, regretting his resignation and commending him on his long years of service.

A committee was named to draw suitable resolutions to be sent to all District officers with appointive power, asking that citizens' associations and the federation be consulted before public officers are appointed.

Metropolis View

The Metropolis View Citizens Association voted last night to request District Commissioners to order removal of a rubbish dump that smolders on the grounds of Soldiers' Home, "annoying residents in a thickly populated community." The action was taken at a meeting at 200 Rhode Island ave. ne.

Sergt. Forrest L. Binswanger, director of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club, described the work of his organization. Mrs. Franklin G. Sartwell presided.

Forest Hills

The Forest Hills Citizens Association last night adopted a resolution indorsing the plan for a representative from the District in Congress as suggested by the Board of Trade.

The association also voted to join with the Northwest Council in asking the District Commissioners to have a sufficient force available to remove snow from the streets quickly, to avoid the trouble experienced last year.

Postoffice Asks Yule Mailing This Month

If you want your Christmas cards and presents to reach their destination before New Year's, this is the month for mailing them, Postoffice Department officials warned yesterday.

Earlier mailing has been necessitated, nationally, by decreases in the number of railway cars and planes available for handling heavier holiday loads, and, locally, by the loss of about 1000 employes to the armed forces.

Explaining that the usual supplementary force of temporary employes is not available this year, Postmaster V. C. Burke said yesterday that the only way in which Christmas deliveries can be assured on time is by spreading them over a longer period.

Meanwhile, District school officials are considering lengthening the Christmas vacation to met the Postoffice Department's request for high school students to fill in beginning December 17.

Mailers are asked to include postal delivery zone numbers with addresses to facilitate delivery. Washington zones are listed on page three of the telephone directory's yellow section.

Overcharge to 6 FBI Girls Cut by District Rent Office

By Hanson H. Hathaway

A landlady who tried to fleece six FBI girls by charging them $130 above the rent ceilings established for the 16th and S sts. ne. area of Washington was under orders from the rent administrator yesterday to scale rentals to $50 per month.

The case was cited following a statement by Charles Henry, Rent Act general counsel for the District, in which he said:

"The $400,000 rental savings effected to date, do not include hundreds of other cases in which complaints have been filed for alleged violations, ranging from $5 to $100 above legal rent ceilings."

The complaints are now under investigation by the rent administrator's office, he said.

He added, also, that proper use by citizens of the Rent Control facilities "undoubtedly has prevented overcharges which, conceivably, would run into astronomical figures."

Henry Describes Case

In describing the FBI incident, Henry called it "one of the worst cases on our records."

One of the girls made an informal complaint against the landlord, after learning that highest rents charged for similar lodgings in the district, near the FBI armory and annex, was $45 per month.

Rent Administration findings bore out her report. The landlady was ordered to explain.

Meantime, two other FBI girls filed formal complaints, the result of which was an order to the landlady to refund overcharges, amounting to $130.

In a second case spotlighted by the survey yesterday, a landlord was forced to restore living quarters to two girls whom he had locked out after learning they protested paying more than legal rent maximums.

Henry intimated that it's a matter of being wise to the law in obtaining equitable treatment from "some landlords."

$850 Refund Ordered

He told of a landlord ordered to refund $850 charged in excess of a rental ceiling of $80 per month.

This case involved a lease arrangement where the tenant was to pay $125 per month for one year, and $150 per month for two remaining years of the lease.

Told by a neighbor that, despite the lease, she had redress before the Rent Administration since the lease rental seemed inordinately high, the tenant filed an informal request for investigation.

The landlord defended the exorbitant rental, claiming "substantial alterations."

Verdict of the rental examiner, when all facts were in on rental and property data in the tenant's area, was reduction of rent to $80 per month.

Coupled with the verdict was an order to return the $850 the landlord had taken from the tenant in month-by-month overcharges.

Room Sharing Profit Field

Room sharing was found by the survey to be a fertile profit field for racket-minded landlords, a typical example being that of a rent "hog" who moved two others into a room formerly occupied by one person paying $30 monthly and "soaked" all three $30 a month each, Henry said.

"Soaked" is the right word, he said. The rent administrator, after investigation, set the maximum rent at $20 per month each.

Unhealthful "overloading" of rooms and apartments is common among landlords, taking advantage of individual desperation to obtain shelter at a price, Henry said.

In such instances tenants were advised by Henry to request action by Rent Control authorities. In most cases it was found that overloads meant rental ceiling violations, with further action recommended to the Health Department.

Education Board Asks Better Roads To Three Schools

Improved approaches to three Washington schools in the vicinity of 24th st. and Benning rd. ne., will be sought at a meeting of the Board of Education tomorrow.

The board plans to request permanent highways in that area, which includes Browne Junior High School, Phelps Vocational School and Young Elementary School, from the District Commissioners. Currently there are no sdiewalks leading to the schools, while the roadbeds are not permanently paved.

Establishment of a time limit for application for reinstatement by school employes, to whom leaves of absence have been granted for engaging in national civilian defense work, will also be considered by the board. Current regulations govern only those employes who have entered the arm l forces.

The board is scheduled to propose equalization of the number of school days in the first and second semesters by extending the first semester through the first week in February.

Mrs. Howe to Speak

Mrs. Harriet Howe, editor of the Consumer Education Service, will be guest speaker at the general meeting of the Women's Club of Lyon Village in Arlington tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. The session is planned at the Clarendon Library. The subject of Mrs. Howe's address is to be "Consumers in Wartime."

Uline and Rodeo Operator Cleared of Contempt Charge

The operators of the "Wild West Rodeo and Thrill Show" at Uline's Arena last week were adjudged not guilty yesterday of having deliberately violated a court order last week forbidding them from using rubber-tired vehicles in stunt acts.

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough of District Court refused to declare in contempt of court Miguel J. Uline, the M. J. Uline Ice, Inc., and Larry Sunbrock, owner of the rodeo. They had been under bond pending their appearance yesterday.

The ground for the Justice's action was that the United States Marshal who served Sunbrock with the restraining order issued by Justice F. Dickinson Letts on Thursday did so at an "unpropitious time." It was while Sunbrock was serving as announcer during the show.

Sunbrock's attorney, Harry Whelan, told the court that Sunbrock was served with two court papers, but only looked at the top one. He said that Sunbrock read a summons ordering his appearance on a suit brought by the Lone Ranger, Inc., and at that time told his employes not to use the name "Lone Ranger," but to substitute the word "Lone Cowboy." Whelan said he did not see the second court paper until later.

As to Uline, the United States attorney's office asked that he not be held in contempt in that they had received information that he had made every attempt to obey the law. Uline's attorney stated that when Uline was served by the marshal, he did everything in his power to stop the show.

Fund Laxity Called D. C. Challenge

"Washington, the capital city of the world, must head the list of oversubscribed Community War Fund campaigns."

This was the appeal of Herbert L. Willett, jr., executive director of Washington's campaign, as reports came yesterday to local headquarters that other cities had already reached their goals while the District stood only 73.33 per cent subscribed.

The drive is now four weeks old, and $3,519,884.09 has been pledged toward the $4,800,000 needed here by 145 agencies for the home front, the United Nations sufferers and U. S. armed forces. Local fund officials pointed to the record in Cleveland, Ohio, one of the first of the larger cities to make its returns. With donations still pouring in, Cleveland has passed its $5,500,000 goal by 102.02 per cent.

Further contributions, brought in through an accelerated drive over the week-end by Washington's 19,000 volunteer workers, will be reported today at 12:30 p. m. at the fifth general report meeting in the "Hall of Flags" in the U. S. Chamber of Commerce. The Metropolitan Police Band will play.

Urged by fund officials at rallies early in the campaign to put their solicitation on a personal basis, many of Washington's volunteer workers draw from their own experiences to bring dollars into the fund barrel.

Mrs. McClenahan's Two Reasons

There is Mrs. R. Wallace McClenahan, a vice chairman of the metropolitan division, for instance. She has two reasons behind the effort she is giving to the Community War Fund. One is her husband, a colonel who has been overseas with the Air Corps for 18 months. The other is "Kentuck."

The story of "Kentuck" came out when Mrs. McClenahan was talking to a group of servicemen on a recent train trip. They told her:

"Y'know, we can't get over how a friend of ours, 'Kentuck' used to brag about Washington, 'Kentuck' wasn't born in Washington. He was born in Kentucky, but the guy had lived in Washington for 18 years and called D. C. his home. He spent all his time bragging about the people in Washington, the big buildings, the town's swell spirit, etc."

"Well, one day last year we were all sitting around our barracks and a pal from Philadelphia was reading his paper. He told 'Kentuck' Philadelphia was ahead of Washington in the campaign and that Washington had better 'hurry up' if it was as good a place as 'Kentuck' kept saying it was. 'Kentuck' just laughed and said, 'just wait until the finish. Washington will top 'em all."

"We felt awfully sorry for 'Kentuck' when the final results of last year's campaign were announced. Washington didn't meet its goal and 'Kentuck' was terribly disappointed. He kept saying he couldn't understand it. That Washington was such a swell place, but that Washington had let him down. The guy was really sick about it."

Mrs. McClenahan relates how she told the boys she was working on this year's campaign and that this year's campaign was NOT going to fail. She told them to tell "Kentuck" next time they saw him that "Washington was not going to let him down again . . . that Washington was going to not only make its goal this year, but go over the top!"

The boys became serious, quiet. Finally one spoke up:

New Tests Seen Aid in Reforming Wayward Child

Classification of children on the basis of thorough physical and mental examinations to determine corrective measures will be instituted at the District Receiving Home after removal to its new location on MacArthur Boulevard, Ray Huff, director of the Board of Public Welfare, said last night at a meeting of the six District Neighborhood Councils at the YWCA, 17th and K sts. nw.

Discussing changes planned for three children's institutions in the District to improve treatment of child delinquents, Huff said that the Receiving Home will be moved soon to the Lincoln Building of the present National Training School for Girls. The latter institution will be relocated at a site in Maryland which has been located but final transactions have not been completed.

The Training School Buildings will then be occupied by the Industrial Home School, now located on Wisconsin ave. in a building to be taken over by the United States Navy.

Commissioners May Ask Penalty For Strays' Owners

Congressional action to control rabies by making it possible for the Health Department to penalize owners of dogs allowed to stray during an epidemic may be asked by District commissioners, it was learned last night.

Following assurance yesterday by Representative Randolph (Democrat) of West Virginia that all the District had to do to get legislation to help curb rabies was to ask for it, commissioners indicated they would look favorably upon legislative suggestions from its health officials.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland last night said the department was most interested in seeing measures taken to allow required leashing and to provide penalties for infractions.

Only 375 Draft Delinquents Counted by District Boards

There are only an estimated 375 "apparently deliberate" draft delinquents in Washington, it was revealed yesterday by the District's 25 draft boards. None of the boards reported any induction orders issued following the expiration of the Sunday midnight deadline by which delinquents were warned to "square up" or face immediate reclassification.

The number of total delinquents is based on statistics made by clerks at 23 of the 25 boards. District headquarters has not yet prepared an official estimate. Four of the 23 boards reported no delinquents. One had a high of 80 men.

More Men Seek Boards

An increase in registrants appearing at boards to report changes of address and status was reported, however.

Several more days will be required for boards to complete their lists of delinquents to be reclassified or inducted, District Selective Service headquarters said.

After the boards have issued the orders it will be an additional 10 days or two weeks before a round-up of the delinquents begins. The additional time will be required, one official said, because the fact that a registrant is delinquent does not deprive him of the right to appeal within 10 days.

Delinquents Reclassified

Nationally, draft boards all over the country began reclassification of delinquents, national headquarters said.

In most cases the order to appear for induction amounts to nothing but a legal step by which the cases fall into the jurisdiction of Federal courts and officers. Most of the delinquents are delinquent because they have failed to report changes of address and the draft boards just don't know where they are. Notices can be mailed only to the last known address, and regstrants may never receive them.

But if the registrant fails to receive the induction through fault of his own he becomes liable to court action, Selective Service officials said.

Budapest String Quartet To Repeat Program Tonight

By Ray C. B. Brown

Gertrude Clarke Whittall Foundation in the Library of Congress presents the Budapest String Quartet (Josef Roismann, Alexander Schneider, Boris Kroyt and Misha Schneider) and Benar Heifetz, violoncello, on Monday night in Coolidge Auditorium. Program: Quintet in E flat major, Op. 12, No. 2 (Boccherini), Quartet in A major, Op. 18, No. 5 (Beethoven), Quintet in C major, Op. 163 (Schubert).

Twice postponed because of the illness of Boris Kroyt and Misha Schneider, the first of a pair of concerts by the Budapest String Quartet was given last evening in Coolidge Auditorium under the auspices of the Gertrude Clark Whittall Foundation in the Library of Congress. The program, which will be repeated tonight, contained a novelty from the late eighteenth century by Luigi Boccherini—namely, his string quintet in E flat major, Op. 12, No. 2. Almost anything by Boccherini is a novelty these days, inasmuch as the only piece of his everybody recognizes on hearing is the minuet from his string quintet in E major, Op. 13, No. 5. This state of affairs is really an injustice to an inventive, resourceful and entertaining composer who was in his period as popular as Haydn.

There are passages of tone color in his chamber music that surpass the best that Haydn did and it would be interesting and instructive were some organization to present a Bocherini festival of chamber music. A complete cycle would would take too long and wear out the patience of both performers and listeners, but a judicious selection could be made from his 125 string quintets, 102 string quartets, 60 string trios, 12 piano quintets, 18 quintets for flute or oboe and strings—that is enough, although it does not complete the list.

The quintet performed last evening may or may not be a fair example; one has no way of knowing since the bulk of Boccherini's music stays on the shelf. One must admit that it had some prosy moments, but the Amoroso movement was built on two attractive themes that reminded one of Haydn and Gluck, and the minuet danced debonairly.

Familiar compositions made up the balance of the program: Beethoven's A major quartet from Opus 18, so Haydnesque in the minuet and Mozartian in the allegro finale, and Schubert's C major quintet, his last chamber music work for which a publisher paid him the munificent sum of 30 florins, equivalent to less than ten dollars today.

City News in Brief

The Commercial Telegraphers Union asked District Court yesterday for an injunction to prevent the Western Union Telegraph Co., Inc., from future violations of a bargaining agreement.

Claiming to represent 30,000 employes, the union states that the telegraph company has violated seniority provisions of the agreement. Suit was filed by Attorneys Hugh C. McKenny, William J. Howder and Charles J. Brandt.

Firemen Track Blaze

Personnel from No. 1 Engine Co. followed a fire from the 1300 block of Connecticut ave. nw. to the 900 block of 17th st. yesterday, tracking a streetcar which was afire unknown to passengers or operator.

A bystander on Connecticut ave. reported the fire, which was centered in the control box of the vehicle, as the car continued along the avenue.

Only casualty was J. W. Thatcher of 1125 19th st. nw., an inspector for the Capital Transit Co., who was treated by a physician in the Farragut Medical Building for minor burns to the hands.

False Robbery Charged

Frances Ward, 22, Negro, was held for the grand jury yesterday by Judge Walter J. Casey in Municipal Court on a charge of staging a pretended robbery of an insurance company at 2001 11th st. nw., where she was a cashier, in order to cover up a $304 shortage.

Club's Whisky Stolen

Lloyd G. Blaine, proprietor of the Rock Inn Club at 1423 U st. nw., reported to police that thieves entered the clubhouse early yesterday and stole eleven cases of various brands of whisky. He placed the total value at $440.

White Slavery Charged Against 2 Men, Woman

Two men and a woman from Roanoke, Va., were arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday on charges of violating the White Slave Traffic Act.

Police said Irma Largin, 27; Robert Lee Wheeling, jr., 25, and Ewell Grant Tasker, 29, brought a 17-year-old Berkeley (W. Va.) girl here and established her in a downtown Washington hotel for purposes of prostitution. The case has been continued until November 9, with the girl being held as a Government witness.

At the same time, Oscar Cullens Hoyle, 22, of 1221 10th st. nw., a bellhop, was arrested with the others and charged with pandering. He will be brought before Police Court today.

Funds Sought for New Site, Building, for Patterson School

District Commissioners will make no effort to remedy the mudhole playground or place a safety fence on Patterson School grounds at Chespeake st. and Nichols ave. sw., until funds for a new temporary building and a new site are secured, Engineer Commissioner Charles W. Kutz told a citizen protest group yesterday.

The present structure, built as a temporary building from Lanham Act funds, now operates for more than 900 students on a three-shift three-hour basis.

The Commissioner said he, personally, would not approve making an addition to the present Patterson School in the light of a letter from the commanding air force operator at Bolling Field, received by him yesterday morning.

Hazard for Bolling Field

The letter said the Patterson School is a definite hazard to aircraft operations from the NESW runway at Bolling Field used by 20 per cent of the field's traffic, and "recommends strongly" no permanent structure be placed there.

The citizens request: Grading of grounds for additional playground facilities and removal of a house now on the grounds to allow for this; fencing of grounds to keep children from running or being pushed in play onto the Chesapeake ave. thoroughfare leading from Bolling Field, and enlarging of the present temporary building to take care of the pupils attending three three-hour shifts there now.

The Board of Education this fall recommended construction of a new temporary building on a permanent site. It recommended also grading and fencing of the present grounds and removal of the house mentioned by the citiezns.

May Use Lanham Fund

The Commissioner said negotiations are now under way with Federal Works Administration to secure funds for a safer site and construction of an additional temporary building. If Lanham Act omney can be had, three or four money can be saved in getting another building ready for occupation, he said.

If refused by Federal Works Administration, Commissioner Kutz said Congress would be asked for the money, and it probably would take six months to have a building ready for occupancy.

Delegates who met with him yesterday were adamant in their requests, maintaining that if the site were not dangerous enough to necessitate closing of the present temporary building, time should be saved by adding to it. They also insisted that safety measures and further recreational work were an immediate necessity at the present school.

Those attending yesterday's meeting represented 572 signers of a petition making the three requests and claimed they could get 30,000 signatures if necessary to loosen purse-strings for improvements. They were the Rev. George J. Cannon, pastor, Washington Highlands Baptist Church; Joseph L. Bockovac, H. Paul Fleming and Mrs. Mabel M. Simms.

Stop Illegal Liquor Trade, Dealers Told

Local retail dealers selling to bootleggers in nearby States were warned last night by Commissioner Guy Mason to stop their illegal trade or expect Government liquor stores in the District.

The Commissioner's statement was made following editorial warning by the liquor trade itself that such operations were making liquor scarce in the city limits and were not good business practice. The editorial appeared in "Beverage Bulletin," issued by Milton S. Kronheim, Inc.

It also followed numerous complaints addressed to Alcoholic Beverage Control Board Chairman Thomas E. Lodge by citizens and "stores themselves."

Commissioner Mason said that citizens were increasingly unable to get the "kind, character and quantity of alcoholic beverages they desire."

Hears State Laws Broken

"I am also informed," he said, "that a great deal of alcoholic beverage is being sold by retailers for distribution in nearby States contrary to the laws of these States."

Asserting he had received governmental control proposals from members of both Houses of Congress, Commissioner Mason said: "I believe in free enterprise with the least governmental control, but if the practices reported are true, governmental control would be justified, and the liquor industry would have nobody but themselves to blame." He further said he would sponsor legislation for control unless sales to nonresidents are stopped.

Asked how retailers were to know to whom they were selling, the Commissioner said: "That's up to them. I'm not going to act as wet nurse to these newborn babies in the liquor business."

In Montgomery County, residents are required to show ration cards indicating their place of residence.

Identification Can Be Required

Chairman Lodge of ABC said yesterday local liquor dealers could legally require identification before granting a sale and could refuse to make sales.

He said some dealers are limiting customers to one bottle to insure no sales to bootleggers.

Most of the across the line sale is being done to Virginia where rationing is in force, it was understood.

Harry Wechsler, president of the District Retail Liquor Association, last night said he would schedule a meeting soon to warn dealers against selling large quantities to one person or to out-of-town residents.

D. C. Groups Net $2200 in Scrap Paper

In addition to supplying invaluable scrap for cartons to carry war materials, Washington's paper salvage drives have netted community organizations some $2200 this year, James E. Colliflower, chairman of the D. C. Salvage Committee, revealed yesterday.

Among the groups receiving salvage proceeds are parent-teachers associations, citizens' associations, Boy Scouts, and civilian defense groups.

Greek Aid Society

Admiral Alexander Sakellariou of the Greek navy will address the Greek Ladies' Mutual Aid Society at 8 o'clock tonight at the YWCA, 17th and K sts. He will speak on the "Greek and Italian Conflict." Among the honor guests will be members of the Greek Embassy staff.

Air Express Gains

Air express and mail carried by Pennsylvania-Central Airlines during the first nine months of this year increased more than 60 per cent, C. M. Knoble, PCA traffic manager for air mail and express, announced yesterday.

Express ton miles flown during this period totaled 284,934 against 171,687 last year, he said, and air mail totaled 355,214 ton miles compared with 219,746 in 1942.

It's Not Too Late To Tell a Yank You Bought a Bond

Although the deadline has passed for sending Christmas packages to servicemen overseas, the Treasury Department yesterday pointed out that V-Mail notifications of war bond purchases will still recah them in time.

V-Mail mailed by December 1, the Post Office Department said, will be delivered to any theater of war by Christmas.

By buying another bond for the men in the service, Treasury officials pointed out, contribution to their postwar security is made that cannot be equaled by any other gift.

Jury Holds Bus Driver In Traffic Death

Olin Harold, 33, of 1014 18th st. ne., was ordered held for Municipal Court under the Negligent Homicide Act in the death of Mrs. Ethel Jackson, 54, of 1126 4th st. se., by a coroner's jury yesterday.

Last Thursday, while on the way home from the cremation of her husband, Mrs. Jackson was struck by a Capital Transit Co. bus operated, police said, by Harold. She died Sunday at Providence Hospital from injuries received in the accident.

With Mother Working on Late Shift Until 1 A. M., Her Teen-Age Children Come and Go as They Wish; This Worries Father, Though She Is Unconcerned

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Ten years ago, I married a widow, because I loved her. But I don't think I would have loved her well enough to marry her if she had not been the mother of two fine children, who greatly appealed to me. At the time I met their mother, these children were being cared for by an aunt,—with whom they were living in the country. Their mother seemed content with that arrangement; and in her circumstances of that day, maybe it was the best thing to do. However, after we had been married two years, I insisted that we bring the children to live with us. She wanted to leave them with their aunt; but I said we should all be together. So I brought them home. The boy was then 6 years old; and the girl was eight.

My wife has a job that she is well satisfied with; and her hours on the job are from 5 p. m. to 1:30 a. m. As the children grew older, I thought they should have regular supervision,—more than their mother was able to give them, when she worked nights. And which I could not give, as I was working late hours, too. Because I dearly loved these children, I felt their mother and I had to make some better plan. Well, her idea was that I should change jobs; so as to be home with them at night. So I did as she wished; but I told her it was wrong; that I should work nights (if either of us did); and she should work days. Also, I pleaded with her to give the children good advice. I explained that she was the one who could best do that. I felt they would take advice better from her than from me. But she always said "Oh, let them go. We will trust in the best, not the worst, for them."

Now, I don't believe in trusting to luck, where children are concerned. I believe as the twig is bent, so the tree inclines. The girl has reached the age where she is beginning to go out with boys; and she wants to stay out later than I think she should, for her own good. I say 10 o'clock is late enough. She wants to come and go as she pleases; and disregards my ideas. But from what I see on the streets at night, in some of the rougher sections of town; and from what I read in the newspapers nowadays, I feel I am right. But I don't know how to convince her. I don't ask: "Where are you going?" Or "Where have you been?" And I don't say: "Be sure you are in by 10 o'clock." I just try to educate her to the importance of being in off the streets at a reasonable hour. You may wonder why her mother doesn't come to the fore. The children don't listen to her any more. They can overpower her in any argument. But still, they are two of the finest kids in the world,—and I want to keep them that way. Please advise me what I should do. D. M. N.

Belated Awakening To Major Problem

DEAR D. M. N.: In view of your wife's blithe, careless optimism in regard to her children, it appears the youngsters might have fared better, in getting their growth, if they had been left with their aunt. Inasmuch as their mother seemed not to want them with her (seemed to shy away from so much tedious responsibility), and argued against and postponed that arrangement as long as possible,—you would have shown most prudence and real consideration for all concerned, if you had kept your finger out of the pie. However, that's water over the dam.

AS FOR HOW to educate the girl to conform to your ideas of safe behavior for her,—that's a large order, at this late date. The business of securing cooperation from teen-age youngsters is an achievement of slow growth, engineered by parents from the children's earliest years. It is not a state of affairs that can be thrown together (like a "rush" construction job) in eleventh-hour emergency. It is wholesome and desirable for a child to grow steadily away from dependence upon parental guiding strings; and a child who is developing normally begins almost involuntarily taking the reins of his life in his own hands, more or less, during his middle teens. And since this is the time when he most needs the beneficent restraint of wise parental counsel, to check and balance his youthful, untried adventurousness,—the most protective relationship the teen-ager can have with a parent is that of deeply valued friendship. If he regards his parent as a wonderful friend, whose worldly wisdom he warmly respects, he is willing to listen and adopt a compromise course, when the parent advises and instructs in major matters. But that filial respect must be earned by the parent. It cannot be obtained by force or wheedling; only by years of day-to-day successful handling of their common problems, in terms of results as satisfactory to the child as to the parent.

Example Has Most Effect on Children

ANOTHER THING: Example is the best teacher. To impart an appreciation of conservative habits,—a belief in their importance,—to children, you must set them an example that speaks for itself, that solidly symbolizes your belief that this is the best way to live. When a girl of 16 has seen her mother (since as far back as she can remember) habitually coming in from work around 2 a. m., it is going to be hard to convince that girl that there is something potentially wrong or dangerous about being out after 10 p. m. Especially so, when her mother seems well satisfied with late hours for herself. Assuming, then, that you cannot lecture your daughter into keeping reasonable school-girl hours,—owing to the night-owl example set by her mother,—I believe the next-best protection-from-harm you can give her is this: A sound education in the so-called "facts of life;" a straight understanding of the practical, hygienic reasons for safeguarding her person; a set of standards by which to judge men, so that she can instantly sidestep the wrong sort; and a conviction of her own superior quality, that will prompt her to disdain the cheap and shoddy, and to demand as her due what is fine and clean in association.

HOW CAN YOU give her this education? Here are two suggestions: The Readers' Advisory Service of the Public Library, central building, 8th and K sts. nw., would help you choose suitable books for her on the subject,—if you went in person to confidentially ask such help. Or Mrs. Eileen Burton, psychiatric social worker with the Child Guidance Clinic of the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, 1464 Columbia rd. nw., telephone ADams 1033, might find the time to give her (and you) invaluably wise, sympathetic counsel.

Women Hear Barringer

Conservation of iron ore and maximum practical use of scrap as a means of insuring an adequate supply of iron and steel in the next national emergency were urged yesterday by Edwin C. Barringer, president and executive secretary of the Institute of Scrap Iron & Steel, Inc., in an address before the Washington Club.

At the present rate of consumption, the reserves of high-grade iron ore in the Great Lakes region will be exhausted in 13 to 15 years, Barringer pointed out. In the postwar period and thereafter it would be in the interest of the national safety to conserve our best iron ore, which can be retained in the ground without deterioration, and make correspondingly greater use of scrap, which cannot be stored without loss, he maintained.

"For the manufacture of iron and steel for the war effort, where standards are exceedingly high, the Nation's steel mills and foundries are utilizing about 51 per cent scrap and 49 per cent pig iron made from iron ore," Barringer said. "For peacetime commodities, the proportion of scrap could be even higher without any sacrifice of quality and with a prudent conservation of ore in the ground for a future emergency. Every ton of scrap used substitutes for four tons of iron ore, coal and other natural resources."

In all warring nations, according to Barringer, the utilization of scrap or waste material, from paper to scrap metals, has been the margin by which desired production goals have been attained. Reliance upon new or virgin material would have bogged down these programs. This year, Barringer stated, one-half of all steel, one-third of all copper, one-fourth of all zinc, one-fifth of all lead and one-sixth of all aluminum will be made from the waste or by-product of the home, factory, railroad and industry.

"For this reason it is urgent that salvage drives, especially the current ones for scrap iron, waste paper, old clothing and fats and grease, be strongly supported by the public," said Barringer.

De Kauffmann Speaks To Democratic Women

By Genevieve Reynolds

No matter how tough the going after the war, there will be no civil strife in Denmark. The people were and are united. So declared Henrik de Kauffmann, Minister from Denmark, guest speaker at the Woman's National Democratic Club's luncheon meeting yesterday.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

"We will have to start over again and build from scratch," he said, "but we are looking forward to a United Nations victory, which will mean victory for us."

He pointed out that the average Dane believes in a world of international cooperation. And that any international agreement even if it means curtailing some of the country's sovereign rights will be backed and supported by the Danes.

"We believe that it is possible to build up a better world only if we learn to give and take," explained the envoy, who said that the Danes have the same ideas of democracy as we.

"Denmark was and always will be a liberal country," said Mr. de Kauffmann. "No matter how long the Germans stay, they won't Germanize the Danes. They will remain Danish."

He cited the example of a group of Danes living south of the border of Denmark, who, though exposed to other influences, had remained Danish for many centuries. He told about his country's nonaggression pact with Germany, and recalled how the Germans marched into the country in May, 1940, in spite of the treaty.

Because Denmark, with its approximate four million inhabitants, could provide eggs, cheese, bacon, milk and many other provisions, the Germans did not destroy the resources. "Germany knew better than to kill the goose that laid the golden egg," he asserted. Hence, the Danes have not been faced with the starvation found in Greece and Poland. However, he said that Germany had robbed the country of at least one-third or one-half of its natural wealth.

Mr. de Kauffmann asserted that resistance to Germany among the Danes is increasing, and would continue to do so. And the reason there is no Danish government-in-exile is because the King and the government were trapped inside Denmark, and now are virtual prisoners of the Germans.

Mrs. Hale T. Schenefield, introduced the speaker and Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, president, presided. Mme. de Kauffmann, wife of the Minister, was an honored guest.

Doings of the Day

Women's Safety Committee of the American Automobile Association meets 9 a. m. for breakfast and to consider the possibility of having an overall safety director for the D. C. schools and the integration of safety courses in the school curriculum. Prof. Amos E. Neyhart, administration head, Institute of Public Safety, Pennsylvania State College, is guest speaker. Mrs. Harold H. Burton, wife of Senator Burton of Ohio tells of the traffic safety program in Cleveland. Mrs. George Thorpe, chairman of the women's division of the safety committee, presides. Among those invited are D. C. Commissioner Kutz, Director of Traffic Van Duzer, Inspector Miller of the Metropolitan Police Department; Robert L. Haycock, superintendent of District schools; Dr. Carroll R. Reed, assistant superintendent in charge of curriculum revision; A. A. Lee, chairman of legislation of the Board of Education, and several other members of the board . . . Fiction group of the D. C. Branch, National League of American Pen Women meets 10:30 a. m. in the league studio.

Republican Women

Highlight of the D. C. League of Republican Women's monthly meeting yesterday afternoon was a talk by Senator Ralph O. Brewster of Maine. He told of his 37,000-mile tour of the battle fronts of the world, which was completed in a little more than two months.

Senator Brewster was one of a committee of five Senators authorized by Congress to secure first-hand information as to how the war was going, how lease-lend money was being spent, and our foreign relations.

The speaker was introduced by Mrs. William N. Doak, program chairman.

Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg gave a short talk asking fo volunteers in behalf of the camp and hospital service of the Red Cross. Mrs. Vandenberg serves in a public relations capacity with the District camp and hospital committee and with the national volunteer service committee of which Mrs. Dwight W. Davis is chairman.

A board meeting was held preceding the open meeting.

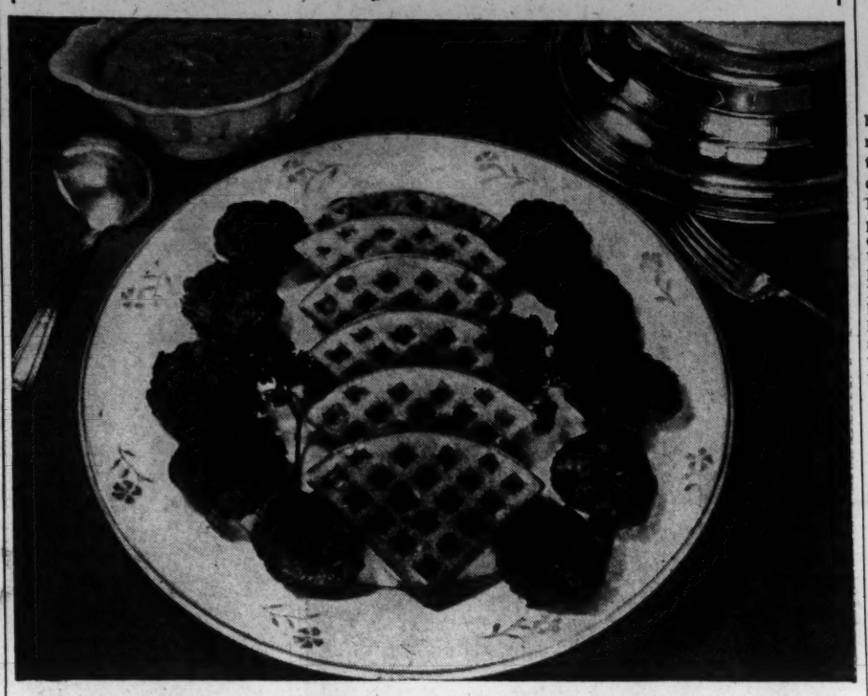
Mrs. Dolly Curtis Gann, the league's president, presided at both meetings. Miss Grace Burton, treasurer, gave a report of the league's finances. Committee chairmen reporting included Mrs. Edward A. Keys, Mrs. R. A. Boone, Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, Mrs. Howard S. LeRoy, Mrs. Maurice A. Thatcher, Mrs. J. H. Branson and Mrs. William H. Scott.

Group Picks Officers

A meeting of the Social Committee of the Daughters of the Barons of Runnemede was held recently at the home of Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins.

At this meeting the following officers of the social committee were elected for the ensuing year: Mrs. Donald M. Earll, chairman; Mrs. David D. Caldwell, secretary, and Miss Mary C. Oursler, treasurer.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter



With the good supply of sausage available, you can make nutritious appetizing meals. And by making cream gravy from the sausage drippings you can conserve the butter supply. Crisp, waffles, sausage patties and cream gravy with a tossed vegetable salad, an appealing dessert and beverage makes up a meal which is not only sturdy but delicious

If you are having a difficult time in making your butter supply reach, turn to cream gravy as an alternate. As an example, serve sausage patties and waffles and cream gravy. This will extend the meat flavor and save butter, too. Cream gravy made from sausage drippings is a hearty addition to a meal. Place the sausage in a cold skillet. Add 3 tablespoons water to every pound of sausage. Cover skillet closely and simmer until water evaporates. Remove the cover, increase heat slightly and brown the sausage. It is important that pork sausage be cooked until it is thoroughly done.

Martha Ellyn

To make the cream gravy, measure 4 tablespoons of the drippings and return to skillet. Mix 4 tablespoons flour with the drippings. Add gradually 2 cups of milk or half milk and half water, stirring constantly. Boil 2 minutes.

You can make up the waffle batter or use the prepared kind. One box of the prepared waffle-mix will make 8 waffles. The use of this waffle-mix will insure a successful, crisp product. But if you want to whip up your own waffle batter, here is a recipe which uses melted drippings for the fat needed.

WAFFLES

Sift flour and measure to 2 cups. Sift the flour with 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt and 2 tablespoons sugar. Beat 2 egg yolks and add to 1¼ cups milk. Add 6 tablespoons melted drippings to the egg-milk mixture. Stir only until flour is moistened. Beat 2 egg whites until stiff and fold into the batter. Put 4 to 6 tablespoons of the batter into hot waffle iron. Bake until waffle stops steaming. Yield, 5 waffles.

Speaking of sausage, how much do you know about this old-time favorite? For instance, did you know that well-flavored fresh pork sausage sold under dependable brand names is made of choice, finely cut fresh pork blended with selected spices and seasonings?

Since freshness is a necessary virtue of good sausage, look for the characteristic pink-and-white color of fresh sausage when you purchase it.

Sausages are a good buy from a ration point and penny-saving viewpoint, because you pay for no bone, because they provide many servings per pound when extended with other foods, and because sausages combine well with unrationed foods.

Remember that good pork sausage whether it be links, patties, or bulk is of the same high nutritive value as other cuts and kinds of meat.

Fresh pork sausage should always be slowly and thoroughly cooked. We recommend you place sausage in a cold frying pan and heat slowly, cooking until the pink color has disappeared. To insure thorough cooking we suggest adding a very small amout of water and steaming for five minutes before browning.

D. C. Players Lose Title in Bridge Tourney

By Marian H. Barre

After four straight victories, local bridge players finally lost their major title in the closing hours of the District Championships, played during the past weekend at the Hotel Shoreham. The new open pair champions are Lieut. Preston C. Ellett and E. F. Harlow of the U. S. Army. Harlow is stationed here at present, Ellett hails from Richmond but signed his entry blank as of New York, his family having moved there while he was serving in Italy; he is the first veteran of the present World War to win a bridge championship.

Runners-up in the game were Mrs. W. S. Athey, Washington, and Murray Gross of Asheville, N. C., who scored 232.6 match points while the winners had 235.3. This second place position receives a master-point award, thus making Mrs. Athey the leading player in the tournament as she had previously captured the women's title and also finished top in her section in the open qualifying round.

Intercity Pair Third

Another intercity partnership was third in open pairs with a score of 232.4, it was formed by Mrs. Isadore Zeskind, of Baltimore, and F. M. Lake, of this city. The defenders, who were Lieut. Herbert Gerst and N. G. Wilson, jr., both of Norfolk, finished fifth, though they had less than 8 points under the winners. A close score like this shows the uniformity of the field.

Trophy for the event is the magnificent Woodward Cup, which is seldom seen in its own home town, in competition for 13 years it has been won 5 times by visiting players. As it stands over 18 inches high the Lieutenants might find it difficult to stow in knapsacks, otherwise the itinerant trophy might take its next journey to the Front.

In the intermediate game Dr. and Mrs. J. B. Gregg Custis, Washington, were runners-up to Mrs. M. Linderman and Mrs. W. H. Gorton, also of this city, while Mr. and Mrs. Roger Wrigley, Richmond, finished third. This was the smallest event of the entire tournament, being less than a third the size of the one-round section made up by non-qualifiers and casual players, which was won by Mrs. Ann Donegan and Miss Jean Ellis. As more than the usual number of casualties occurred the special section was exceptionally strong. Miss Florence Thompson and Adolph Fibel ranked second under the Donegan-Ellis partnership.

George A. Cook Travels From Boston To North Carolina for Ceremonies

"One-a-day Cook" is the way George A. Cook, of Takoma Park, Md., is being greeted ever since he served as best man at the wedding of one son in Boston and returned to his home in time to perform the same duty for another son the following day.

As wartime weddings go these days Mr. Cook was hurriedly called to Boston where Charles Granfield Cook, USNR seaman first class, and Mary Jane Garrison, daughter of Mrs. Walter E. Lindner, of Silver Spring, Md., were married Thursday. Before the ceremony took place at St. James' Catholic Church, however, Mrs. Cook telephoned her husband not to lose any time after the marriage in coming home because their other son, Corpl. George A. Cook, jr., USA, a paratrooper at Camp Mackall, N. C., received leave and planned to be married the next day.

Losing no time Mr. Cook reached Takoma Park last Thursday at midnight and was ready to have a visit with his son before his marriage to Alyce Jayne Walker, daughter of Mrs. Laurel Walker and the late William Walker of Takoma Park, at the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church, Friday.

Meantime Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cook are staying at the Statler Hotel in Boston until the bridegroom reports for sea duty. After a wedding trip Mrs. George Cook, jr., will return to Takoma Park. Both brides plan to live with their mothers for the duration.

Mrs. Linder and Mrs. Walker each gave their daughters in marriage. Corporal Cook attended three years at the University of Maryland before entering the service. His bride is a graduate of Marjorie Webster School.

Gen. Benavides Returns Soon

Returning to Washington the end of this week, Gen. Vasquez Benavides, superintendent of the Peruvian Military Academy, will stop here briefly and then be on his way for a tour of Fort Knox, Ky., and other military posts in the South and Southwest.

General Benavides is now at the United States Military Academy at West Point, where he went for a week's visit after stopping in New York.

Helen Toomey, Mr. Ingoldsby To Be Married

Mrs. James A. Toomey of Crestwood announces the engagement of her daughter, Helen Eugenie, to John L. Ingoldsby, jr., of Washington. Miss Toomey is the daughter of Mrs. James A. Toomey and the late James A. Toomey, former professor of law at Georgetown University Law School and prominent attorney in Washington.

She attended Immaculata Seminary, Georgetown Visitation Convent and George Washington University, where she was a member of Pi Beta Phi Sorority.

Mr. Ingoldsby is the son of John L. Ingoldsby of Washington. He is a graduate of St. Thomas Military Academy in Minnesota, Georgetown University and Georgetown Law School and is now an Assistant United States Attorney.

The wedding will take place the latter part of December.

Miss Propst Plans January Wedding

It will be a January wedding when Miss Thelma Irene Propst, daughter of Mrs. Otis C. Propst and the late Rev. Mr. Propst, becomes the bride of Sergt. Paul Fricks, son of Otto Fricks and the late Mrs. Fricks.

The bridegroom is from Washington and from Greenville, S. C.

Venezuelan Attache and Bride Arrive Here

Stopping off in Corpus Christi, Tex., just long enough to be married last Thursday, the Venezuelan Embassy's new Air Attache, Maj. Josue Lopez Henriquez brought his bride on to Washington, arriving on Saturday, where he reported for duty to his country's envoy here.

The former Miss Gloria Maria Opel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Opel, were married at the home of the bride's parents, with the Rev. Dr. George West Diehl, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, officiating.

Only a small group of relatives and intimate friends were present at the ceremony which was followed by a small reception. Arrangements were as simple as possible, because, due to the difficulties of wartime travel, none of the bridegroom's family were able to be present.

Senora de Henriquez was educated at Judson College in Marion, Ala., and the bridegroom is a native of San Antonio, Venezuela, and was graduated from the Venezuelan Military Academy.

The couple are staying at the Fairfax Hotel temporarily until they find a house or apartment, as are a number of new arrivals on the staff of the Venezuelan Embassy.

Among the other new arrivals at the embassy are the Naval Attache, Capt. Aristides Rojas and Senora de Rojas and the Assistant Military Attache, Capt. Jesus Manuel Gamaz Arellano, who is unmarried.

Captain and Senora de Rojas, who arrived in Washington the middle of the week, are both natives of Venezuela and speak but little English.

Purely Personal

The Ambassador of Brazil and Mme. Martins are en route to Rio de Janeiro by plane where they will visit for several weeks.

Representative Jessie Sumner of Illinois will be hostess at a dinner at the Mayflower tomorrow evening.

The Counselor of the Finnish Legation and Mme. Toivola will entertain at an informal dinner Friday evening.

Prince and Princess Pignatelli will entertain at a dinner party at their home, Uplands, Wednesday evening.

Honoring her mother, Mrs. Ralph Worthington, here from New York on a visit, Mrs. Norman Keith will give a dinner at the F Street Club on Thursday. Mrs. Worthington, who arrived last weekend, will be in Washington for a week.

Mrs. Edward Treglown left yesterday for Montreal where she will visit briefly. She plans to return to Washington on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Brian McMahon will give a cocktail party honoring Charles Lockwood Wednesday.

Mrs. Walter Raleigh Amesbury is in New York to attend the Children's Village benefit performance of "Othello." She will return to Washington tomorrow.

Lieut. John Martin Royall, jr., formerly stationed at Fort Jackson, S. C., is now with the Army Air Corps at Maxwell Field, Ala. Lieut. Royall is the son of John M. Royall of Richmond and Atlanta and the nephew of Miss Louise Royall of Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Kaufman have returned to their apartment at the Broadmoor after spending a week at the Savoy-Plaza in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. William Illch are in Norfolk visiting their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. B. Franklin Hofheimer, jr.

'Good Neighbors Entertained at Halloween Party

Cementing the Good Neighbor idea still more firmly by introducing over a hundred United Nations' representatives to an old-fashioned Halloween party, Miss Genevieve Reynolds entertained on Saturday evening at the clubhouse of the American Newspaper Women's Club.

Autumn leaves, cornshocks, and gay orange and black decorations were the motif, and in the dining room, lighted papier-mache pumpkins glowed ferociously at the guests, who gathered around the hot mulled-cider or iced rum-punch bowls.

The Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy, Col. Felipe Munilla and Senora de Munilla were among the early arrivals as were the Military Attache of the Chilean Embassy Lieut. Col. Guillermo Lopez-Larrain and Senora de Lopez-Larrain.

The only dollar-a-year woman in Washington, Mrs. Betty Barton Greco, was quite a hit of the evening. She is the head of the Women's Salvage unit of the WPB.

Still others included Baroness Unguern of Russia, who thrilled many of the guests with her fortune-telling; the Counselor of the Yugoslavian Embassy, Dr. Vladimir Rybar and Mme. Rybar; Mme. Albuquerque Lima, wife of the Brazilian Military Attache; Col. Wlodzimierz Onacewicz, Military Attache of the Polish Embassy; Slavko Cerrick from Turkey; Miss Camilla Chapman; the Second Secretary of the Bolivian Embassy, Don Emilio Anze-Franco; Mr. and Mrs. George Connery, Demetri Tunieff, Capt. Roger O'Leary and many more.

Traveler Returned From Mexico Tells All—About King Carol of Rumania and the Woman of His Choice

"ALL RIGHT now . . . tell us all about King Carol and Mme. Lupescu."

That's what several guests at a Washington party the other night asked an American tourist just returned from Mexico City. Somebody had wanted to know, first, if he saw the Rumanian King, and he had no sooner said

MME. LUPESCU

"Yes," than he had an audience around him.

"What is Mme. Lupescu like?" he was asked. "What kind of a house do they live in?" "Are they eager to come to the United States?"

The crowd pushed in closer and the returned traveler settled down to make an evening of it. His frank answers to dozens of questions presented an illuminating picture of the erstwhile Rumanian monarch and the woman of his choice.

"Mme. Lupescu is a charming and gracious woman," said the American, who prefers to be nameless in this piece. "She is a woman of cultivated tastes. She is devoted to but one human being . . . and has been for the past twenty years. Her time is taken up in Red Cross work, the care of her garden and the cooking of most of His Majesty's meals."

"Oh very. Her skin is flawless. . . . and by the way, her hair isn't red. It's auburn; quite dark."

HE WENT ON to say that the couple live in an old villa surrounded by a stone wall, and that they have three small bedrooms and two tiny baths. There are no closets in the house and all of the baggage—some 60 pieces—have been piled neatly on the front porch ever since they arrived. They have the place on a month-to-month rental basis, and manage nicely with one maid, a French girl who also does typing for the King.

"The King wants to come to the United States only if his services can be used in behalf of the Allies to help sustain and inspire his people in their action of resistance agains. the German," the returned traveler continued. "Among his most devoted friends, incidentally, is a 20-year-old boy whom he has never met, but who has been writing to him weekly ever since he left Rumania. When, and if, the King ever comes to this country, he has hopes of meeting this friend, who lives in New Jersey."

The King naturally deplores the untrue stories that have been circulated by Nazi agents about his so-called luxurious living and expensive pastimes . . . but he has never taken occasion to deny them because he has felt they were so obviously Nazi propaganda. For example, there was the report that he had brought millions out of his country with him though the truth of the matter is, he is far from being a wealthy man.

OTHER STORIES put out by Nazi agents have told of the King's heavy poker playing, his night clubbing and his expanding financial interest in a Mexico City night club. According to my American informant, the King has never played poker either in Mexico or elsewhere; he and Mme. Lupescu have dined in clubs only on a few occasions and he has no financial interest in any night club.

"The King did tell me that he had played a few games of bridge in Mexico and that he frequently followed the Mexican custom of playing 'showdown,' that is, the turning over of one card and the one with the highest card wins—wins one peso, which is 20 cents in United States money."

King Carol's greatest extravagance since he has been in Mexico City centers around his collection of American gramophone records. He wears $3 American white shirts, smokes cigarettes in a holder very similar to the one President Roosevelt uses and on two occasions nearby neighbors have come over to his house to ask for the loan of a cup of sugar or a quarter pound of butter.

"ALL THE neighbors seem to be very fond of both the King and Mme. Lupescu," the informant went on. "On the King's birthday, October 16, a little old woman who lives across the street baked a cake and brought it over to the King. He was delighted and so was Mme. Lupescu. They asked her to stay to tea, she did, and went away a couple of hours later declaring that in all her 76 years she had never met a more delightful couple."

There were other questions . . . but no time for the answers, as the time set for the party's closing hour was long since past. But I'd still like to know (1) if it's true that Lupescu wants to come to this country to have her face lifted. (2) if most Rumanians in America would like to have King Carol in the United States (3) when, and if, they will ever come here at official invitation.

Time, alone, will tell.

"YOU OUGHT to write a book about it," is what countless friends have said to former United States Ambassador to the Soviet Union, Admiral Standley. His answer? "I may . . . but it won't be another 'Mission to Moscow.'" Then, diplomatically, he goes on to say that while the Davies tome, made into a motion picture, was regarded as a comedy in the Soviet Union, it was nevertheless greatly appreciated on the basis of being extremely in tone to Russia.

Now in New York for a few days, Admiral and Mrs. Standley will return soon, and will be here until after the current U. S. "mission to Moscow" gets back in town. Their plans for later are still indefinite. They may stay in the East; they may go back to their California home . . . but wherever they go, chances are Admiral Standley will find time to write his memoirs. His wife, frankly, thinks he should. "His letters from the Soviet were so interesting," she said "And I've kept all of them. They, alone, would make half a book."

Admiral and Mrs. Standley were centers of special interest at Mrs. Edward Beale McLean's dinner on Sunday evening, when more celebrities per square foot gathered in the spacious drawing room of Friendship than I've seen under one roof in a long, long time.

Just a few flashbacks: Mrs. Ingram Stainback wore a white lei that picturesquely indicated she hailed from Hawaii. . . . "If Justice Murphy would pluck his eyebrows, he could pass for Henry Luce's twin." observed one woman as she saw the two entering the drawing room. . . . Attractive Clare Boothe Luce had with her Mrs. Elizabeth Cobb Rogers (daughter of Irvin S. Cobb), who was down from New York for the weekend. . . . Viscount Halifax, just back from England, had a sizable share of the spotlight all evening, and much of the rest was dividid between a gilt-edged contingent of Washington notables and a number of New Yorkers who came to the Capital especially for the party.

Mrs. W. C. Brown Avers Husband Worked At It Three Years

Ask Mrs. William Calloway Brown, whose husband is an engineer in the office of the rubber director of War Production Board, how they found the house they have leased at 4439 Albemarle st. n.w., and she will credit her luck to her husband's persistence.

"He was here three years and he called the real estate companies every day. Even the switchboard operators came to call him by his first name," she said.

Mr. Brown came here with the Corps of Engineers when the War Production Board was an infant agency. Mrs. Brown, a native of Richmond, Va., remained behind in that city with her 3½-year-old son, Bowie Scott, until her coming to Washington a few weeks ago.

She is a nurse's aide and had served 50 hours after graduation when Bowie Scott's nursemaid left, thus terminating that phase of her war work for a while. But now they're all settled and Mrs.

Junior Naval Officers Plan For Ball at Sulgrave Club

Affair to Take Place Nov. 6; Many Other Events Will Be Held Here During Season

The junior naval officers' committee, which has been so successful in arranging a number of brilliant and well-attended balls during the past two years, has now been reconstituted with a large, more representative membership, all of whom are busy planning even better affairs for this season.

The first of the events on the fall and winter calendar for the reorganized committee will be "The Autumn Dance" at the Sulgrave Club on Saturday, November 6, from 9 until 2 o'clock.

Membership of the committee now includes junior officers from all branches of the naval service. This year the group was incorporated by Lieuts. Charles E. Peterson, Manson F. McCormick and Travis T. Brown.

These dances, all of which have now become quite established affairs, have never lacked for patronage, and it has been customary for the highest ranking officers of the United States Navy and other United Nations' navies to be present. The last ball, at the Mayflower, was attended by around a thousand guests.

This year's autumn dance on November 6, the first of a series under the aegis of a new group, will be of necessity somewhat limited in scope, due to the size of the Sulgrave Club. Invitations for this event, have, therefore, been mailed to 200 naval officers. Proceeds from this dance, as from similar affairs in the past, are to go to the Navy Relief Society.

The general chairman for the November 6 dance will be Lieut. Comdr. John J. White, jr., who is being assisted by Lieut. Comdr. Donald Watson and Lieutenant McCormick, with a committee of other naval officers representative of every naval activity in the Washington area.

Mrs. H. F. Downe Arrives Here To Spend Winter

Back in Washington with a definite promise "to be here most of the winter" is Mrs. Henry F. Downe, of New York and Paris, who has joined her sister, the Countess de Marenches, at the Fairfax Hotel.

A leading hostess in Paris for a quarter of a century, Mrs. Downe left her home in the Rue Verdi only a few hours before the Nazis took over the French capital. She has been making her home in this country since the autumn of 1940 and has been in Washington most of the time the past two winters.

Shortly after she arrived in New York in 1940 she was off on a cross-country lecture tour for the Red Cross. Since coming to Washington this time, she has already enrolled in the Red Cross and plans to do much work in that connection.

Socially prominent Washingtonians remember that a visit to the Downe home in prewar Paris was as much a regulation part of their stay as champagne cocktails at the Ritz bar. So, as can be expected, Mrs. Downe will be widely entertained during her Washington sojourn.

Dinner Is Fete For General, Mrs. Glassford

As a farewell fete for Gen. Pelham H. Glassford, recently retired, and Mrs. Glassford, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz entertained at dinner last evening at their home on Foxhall rd.

Senator and Mrs. Lister Hill, Senator and Mrs. Burnet Maybank, Senator Arthur Capper, Representative Sol Bloom, Miss Vera Bloom, Mr. and Mrs. H. Clifford Bangs, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mme. Willie Georges-Picot, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Waldrop, Mrs. Lillian Detre and Lieut. Guy de Saint-Croix were guests.

The Glassfords will soon leave Washington for the West, where they will make their home.

Senator's Wife Entertains for Senator's Daughter

Mrs. D. Worth Clark entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Army-Navy Club in honor of Mrs. Mary Thomas Peavey, who recently arrived here from Twin Falls, Idaho. The daughter of Senator John Thomas of Idaho, she expects to be here with her father for some time.

Guests at the luncheon included Mrs. William O. Douglas, Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mrs. Bruce Smith, Mrs. Bulkley Griffin, Mrs. Clarence Lee Miller, Mrs. William A. Morgan, Mrs. William Dolph, and Mrs. Frances Thomas.

C. W. Witherow, Bride Return From Trip

Mr. and Mrs. C. William Witherow have returned from their wedding trip and are at home in Arlington, Va. Before her marriage, October 16, Mrs. Witherow was Miss Jane Gray.

Construction In South Rises 17% in Month

Increased activity in industrial, public engineering and highway construction pushed the total for Southern building up 17 per cent in October over September for a dollar gain of $90,302,000, the Manufacturers Record said yesterday.

The October figure increased to $1,275,488,000, the figure for the year thus far, a drop from comparable periods of the last two years but a 20 per cent gain over the first 10 months of 1940.

Private building for the first 10 months of this year amounted to $64,436,000 against $110,158,000 in the corresponding 1942 period; industrial construction was $252,-969,000 against $997,720,000, while public building stood at $567,636,-000 against $1,865,917,000, and engineering at $274,550,000 compared with $392,147,000. Road awards for the two periods were $115,897,-000 and $147,104,000.

PCA Cargoes Gain 60 Per Cent

Express and air mail carried by Pennsylvania-Central Air Lines each increased more than 60 per cent during first nine months of 1943 as compared with a similar period in 1942, it was announced yesterday by C. M. Knoble, traffic manager.

Express ton miles flown during this period totaled 284,934, against 171,687 last year, while air mail totaled 355,214 ton miles compared with 219,746 last year.

Air Mail Loads Set Record

Record air mail loads, running as high as 260,000 letters to a plane, are being carried by United Air Lines' new Coast-to-Coast cargoliners, it was shown yesterday in a company report on the first two weeks of the service's operation.

Approximately 160,000 letters are being flown over United's entire transcontinental route by each cargoliner assigned to the service, according to C. P. Graddick, director of United's air cargo department.

Coca-Cola Co. reported September quarter net earnings of $6,678,-555, equal to $1.67 a common share, compared with $6,033,844, or $1.51, for the 1942 quarter. Profits for the nine months ended September 30 were $18,087,047, or $4.52 a share, compared with $17,067,231, or $4.62 for the 1942 period.

Coca-Cola Dividends

Directors of the Coca-Cola Co. declared a year-end dividend of $1 and a regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents on common shares. Both are payable December 15 to holders of record December 1. These payments bring the total to $4 per share for the year, the same as in 1942.

L.O.F. Aide Promoted

North A. Wright, a special representative in Washington of the Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co., has been appointed assistant to G. P. MacNichol, jr., vice president in charge of sales. In addition to his new duties, Mr. Wright will continue Washington contacts with Government agencies in connection with the company's war production activities.

Extra Dividend for Sears

Directors of Sears, Roebuck & Co. today declared an extra dividend of $1.25 a capital share in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents a share, both payable December 10 to stockholders of record November 12.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Nov. 1 (AP).—Grains staged a brisk rally today after President Roosevelt's message to Congress on the food situation was out of the way, buying coming from commission houses, local traders who had previously gone short, and milling interests. Final prices were at about the day's highs.

The upturn which developed when the Presidential message was made public was a direct reversal of the trend prevailing prior to that time. In early trading wheat was down about a cent and other grains showed fractional losses. Trading was quiet before the message, but picked up later in the session.

At the close wheat was ¼-⅝ higher, December 1.56½, May 1.55¼; rye was up ⅝-1⅛, December 1.13⅞@1.14; oats were ahead ⅝-¾, and barley showed gains of ⅞-1⅛.

Select Issues Are Buoyant In Uneven List

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Specialties, including liquors and a variety of peace-rated stocks, made a relatively good showing in today's first November market although many leaders never were able to get out of the minus column.

Aiding issues with a favorable postwar outlook was the text of the Moscow conference proceedings confirming interallied cooperation both during and after the present conflict. This had been pretty well discounted marketwise, however, and progress in most cases was moderate. A big batch of regular and extra dividends propped individual shares.

The list developed mild irregularity at the opening and declines of fractions to 2 or more points were in the majority at the close.

The Associated Press 60-stocks average was off .1 of a point at 50.7. Dealings generally were on the slow side although sizable blocks of low-priced issues put volume at 648,660 shares compared with 668,-010 last Friday.

Stocks benefiting from extra payments to shareholders were Decca Records, Standard Oil (New Jersey) and Sears Roebuck. Branniff Airways came on the big board for the first time today and sold at 14 in the morning, but slipped to 13¼ after declaration of an initial 15-cent dividend.

Bonds were irregularly lower. Grains recovered when the text of the President's message to Congress on the food situation was published. At Chicago advances of ½ to ⅞ of a cent a bushel were registered for wheat, ⅜ to ⅝ for oats and ⅝ to 1¾ for rye. Cotton was unchanged to down 25 cents a bale.

Seaboard Plan Declared Unjust

Baltimore, Nov. 1 (AP).—Objectors to a proposed reorganization plan for the Seaboard Air Line Railway declared today that holders of certain securities would receive more than 200 per cent of the value of their bonds in new securities, while others would get as much as 150 per cent.

The spokesman for a committee representing first and consolidated mortgage bondholders said underlying bonds of the Carolina and Central Division of the railroad system, which has a claim of approximately $1,300 per bond, would be allotted new first mortgage bonds, income bonds and other securities with a par value of about $3,000.

Certain other bonds would be paid off in securities with as much as 150 per cent of the respective claims, the spokesman added.

Gen. Motors Declares 50-Cent Dividend

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Directors of General Motors Corp. today declared a dividend of 50 cents a share on the common stock, the same as has been paid in recent quarters. The dividend is payable December 13 to stock of record November 12. The regular quarterly dividend of $1.25 a share on the $5 preferred also was ordered, payable February 1 to stock of record January 10.

J. I. Case Co. Plans 4-for-1 Stock Splitup

Racine, Wis., Nov. 1 (AP).—Directors of the J. I. Case Co., agricultural equipment concern, have approved a plan calling for a four-for-one split-up of the company's common stock, it was announced today.

'Sons o' Fun' Is Delirious Both Sides of Footlights

By Nelson B. Bell

"SONS O' FUN." The Messrs. Shubert present Olsen and Johnson in two acts and 25 scenes of musical nonsense and dancing, with Frank Libuse, Joe Besser, Wynn Murray, Lionel Kaye, The Pitchmen, Steve Olsen, Jean Moorhead, Jack Whitney, Margot Brander, June Johnson, Donat Gautier, Moran & Wiser, Donald Green, Bobby Jarvis, Ivan Bankoff, Shannon Deas, John Howes, John Keno, Kitty Murray, Sidney Gibson, Magna & Consiglio, the Crystal Twins, Rena & D'Amato, George Karle, Eddie Smith, Jerome Williams, Enkowe & Allen, Rosario & Antonio and large, mixed ensemble. Fun by Olsen and Johnson and Hal Block; songs by Jack Yellen and Sam E. Fain. Dances directed by Robert Alton; scenery and costumes by Raoul Pene DuBois. Staged and lighted by Capt. Edward Duryea Dowling; supervised by Harry Kaufman. At the National Theater.

"Sons o' Fun," the new Olsen and Johnson jamboree that opened a two weeks' engagement in the National Theater last night, so far outdistances and outdares its lunatic predecessor, "Hellzapoppin," that there is no valid comparison between the two. "Hellzapoppin" was merely a tuning-up exercise.

Especially is this true of the elements of the present two-act-and-25-scene gaucherie that depend upon audience participation for the evening's high notes of rowdy, raucous and riotous fun.

This aspect of the evening is modestly initiated by the sprinkling of members of the cast throughout the house, to heckle and cajole the pewholders into mild adventure in becoming part of the entertainment. It is robustly amplified in the "Hellzapoppin Night in Buckeye, Arizona" interval, when the chorus girls come down into the aisles, persuade male members of the audience to dance, don their coats, herd them onto the stage to take part in a "Paul Jones" dance and then trick each man into putting on whatever coat his partner of the moment is wearing. Very tumultuous and testy, but weak tea compared with the "Auction Sale" interlude. This is really something!

Patrons Turn a Profit

Not only are members of the audience weighted down with valuable plunder on 5 cent bids, but the zany business reaches the apex of unconventionality—to use the mildest word that suggests itself—when prizes are offered the winners of a contest among three mixed couples. The contest is to determine which woman can remove her fully dressed "partner's" undershirt in the shortest possible time. Now I ask you! Anyhow, it makes for more audience pandemonium than has ever before been heard in a theater.

In addition to this outraging of the conventions, Olsen and Johnson and their countless associates put on a tremendous amount of show. A great deal of it is so cyclonic and so noisy—what with the loudspeakers, the explosions and the apparitions floating about over the heads of the customers—that heads or tails cannot be made of it, beyond the whoops and hollers it inspires.

Ole and Chic, the two Midwestern Scandinavians, are all over the place, singly and as a team of the most unorthodox comedians known to the theater. Not all of their insanities are new. They are not all old, either. But none fails of its purpose to nudge the spectator a little nearer complete collapse—or maybe apoplexy.

Whole House a Stage

In their support are an uncounted number of specialists and comics of all sizes, descriptions and both genders, who romp all over the premises, beginning in the lobby before curtain time spreading into the most remote crannies of the theater during intermission, carrying on during the audience's final exit and sometimes even performing on the stage!

In the song numbers and swirling ensembles, Wynn Murray blondely and a little stridently executes the prima donna chores. June Johnson is the pert soubret of the goings-on; the rotund Joe Besser, ridiculous most of the time and monotonous the rest, sparks several of the skits and the Pitchmen, Al Ganz and Al Meyers, would stop the show, if such a show, were stoppable, with their trick vocal "instrumentalism."

The "Moment Musical" presented by Frank Libuse and Margot Brander, with the assistance of Ernest D'Amato, is a combination of musical skill and contagious clowning that already is familiar to Washington audiences.

Dancing At Its Zenith

Not so, Rosario and Antonio, Gypsy dancers, who are the only close rivals of Carmen Amaya the Capital has seen. Their fiery Flamenco numbers are marvels of rhythm, grace and velocity that won the unstinted acclaim of last night's hilarious capacity house.

Occasionally the company takes time out from its madness to indulge in a colorful ensemble of swift movement, beauty and the considerable cutaneous display that is deemed the chorus' major function in any musical frivolity.

No sketchy midnight review could hope to include mention of all the innovations, or all the innovators, woven into an utterly delirious evening. It has to be seen to be believed.

It was seen and believed last night, as I have said, by a crowd that filled the National to its last inch and included many notables, among them Secretary of the Navy Knox and Secretary of the Senate Halsey, both of whom were "made part of the show" and entered wholeheartedly into the unceremonious frolic.

That is nothing to what the run-of-the-mill cash customers did! It was Halloween a day late on E street.

A Daughter and Two Sons o' Fun

JUNE JOHNSON, OLE OLSEN, CHIC JOHNSON, the two stellar roisterers and one of their more vivacious, feminine accomplices in "Sons o' Fun," the luscious lunacy which last night opened a fortnight's engagement in the National Theater. Olsen and Johnson are making their first local appearance in years

LEONARD LYONS
Broadway Potpourri

New York, Nov. 1.

In other years it might have been revolutionary, but in this autumn of 1943 the people of Hollywood look upon it as typical and perhaps a pattern to be followed: It concerns the elegant Baron de Baubigny and his Thursday night adventures. In the film colony, Thursday night is the traditional maid's - night - out. The Baron, as all of Hollywood, goes to a restaurant and then to the night clubs on those Thursdays when his cook gets the day off . . . But Baron de Baubigny's cook has an agreement with her employer, and on Thursday nights he takes her to the restaurants and night clubs of Hollywood.

FIORELLO LAGUARDIA

Cecil Roberts, the British author, made a lecture here a few days ago. Some hecklers attended, but Roberts had the answers for all their cracks. One of them finally shouted: "Why don't you stop giving us that Limey accent?" . . . "Sir," replied the British author, "I speak with the same accent as the 8th Army."

Mayor LaGuardia was in Washington.

Sam Goldwyn, jr., 17-year-old son of the movie producer, is enlisting in the Army . . . There soon will be additional resignations from the OPA office here . . . The announcement from the White House, about the President's first meeting with a new Business Men's Advisory Council—which included Eric Johnston, Ben Fairless, David Sarnoff, F. C. Crawford, president of the NAM—contained Steve Early's statement that the press knew nothing about this. It was the first item in this column four days ago . . . Pvt. Cal Tinney, the commentator who has four children, passed his tests as an aerial gunner last week.

Sammy Renick, the jockey, was invited by a prominent Los Angeles lady to take her horseback riding. Renick took her to the Riviera, where they hired two horses. "That'll be $3 an hour, payable in advance," the proprietor told Renick . . . The jockey smiled and paid. "I'm paying you $3 for letting me ride your horse for one hour," said Renick. "A short time ago I received $2500 for riding a horse for 1 minute and 36 seconds—in winning the Metropolitan Handicap."

Visitors at the Soviet embassy in Washington are finding it more difficult to enter than in the days when Maxim Litvinoff was ambassador. Litvinoff scoffed at any precautions. Once, shortly before he returned to Russia, he was visited by a friend who was worried because it had been so easy for him to gain access to the ambassador's suite. "Aren't you worried about assassins?" Litvinoff was asked . . . "Nowadays," he replied, "with so many millions being killed, what does one life matter?"

Hedda Hopper's Hollywood

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 1.—What goes on with Spencer Tracy? Three weeks ago he, Marilynn Maxwell, and a guitarist left for Alaska to entertain troops. They got as far as Seattle and went no farther. Now Spence is off to Denver, Colo., to participate in a rally for the united war chest fund. What happened to the Alaska trip? What caused him to change his mind? The boys up there are starving for entertainment and they've been waiting to welcome him for many months . . . Is Warner's don't intend to release "The Desert Song" with Dennis Morgan, why not do a remake of it with Nelson Eddy and Jeanette MacDonald? Their fans are beginning to yell again . . . Gilbert Miller is about to cast Clare Luce's latest—"Snow in Summer." We're waiting with bated breath. Has being a Congresswoman made her pen less acid? Remember "The Women?" . . . Vinton Freedley is dangling a juicy contract before Martha Raye's eyes for his "Jackpot" on Broadway.

SPENCER TRACY

Clap Hands

If you howl long enough you're either shut up or get what you want. I've kept howling, so this holiday season you'll again be able to see Walt Disney's "Snow White." That's something to look forward to. . . . Mayris Chaney, Mrs. Roosevelt's friend, is opening a millinery shop in Beverly Hills. . . . "Diamond Horseshoe" will wait for Betty Grable. Last thing Betty does before going into temporary retirement will be "Cuddle Up a Little Closer" for "Four Jills and a Jeep." . . . Eva Gabor dropped at Twentieth Century. . . . Madeleine Le Beau is hoping to land a good part on Broadway. . . . Merle Oberon offered "George Sand." Columbia says they'll shoot her part of the picture first if she'll do it, because she's all set for "If Winter Comes" opposite Walter Pidgeon at Metro.

Did You Know

In John Nesbitt's latest, "Don't You Believe It," was the startling statement that George Washington was our seventh President. According to Nesbitt, this is accurate. The men who preceded Washington acted under articles of confederation, whereas Washington became President under the Constitution. . . . Brian Donlevy has pinup girls in his dressing room, too—Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, Sister Elizabeth Kenny, his baby daughter, Mary Churchill, Eleanor Roosevelt and Queen Wilhelmina. Can't tell whether he's being sentimental or it's politics.

Big Time In Old Town

Hollywood Canteen hopes if Clark Gable returns it will be able to get him to unveil the hall of honor photographs of men who have joined up. Canteen's celebrating its first year, but it's really one year and one month. I've suggested before—I will again—that a medal be given the girls who have done the most. It's a cinch Hedy Lamarr would get one, also Quida Rathbone. The girl who's building up to it is Bunny Waters. She goes four nights a week and dances with the boys. . . . Jimmy McHugh and Harold Adamson of "Coming In On a Wing and a Prayer" have signed for two years with Darryl Zanuck.

Willkie Urges 'Opening Door' In Palestine

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, Nov. 1—Wendell Willkie, in a message to Jewish leaders meeting in Carnegie Hall tonight, said he was opposed to the Chamberlain white paper of 1939 by which Jewish immigration into Palestine was restricted and will end entirely in April, 1944. Gov. Thomas E. Dewey also sent a message to the meeting in which he said it was essential to "open the doors of Palestine" to Jewish immigration.

"The United Nations," Willkie said, "must prevent the closing of Palestine either as a temporary haven or a permanent home. The 1939 white paper, which was declared illegal by the Mandates Commission of the League of Nations, provides that by the end of March, 1944, the gates of Palestine are to be closed to Jewish immigration.

"The policy of this white paper mirrors the era of appeasement which gave it birth, and, as that philosophy has been discredited, so must the white paper be abrogated. The extent of Jewish immigration to Palestine must be measured by the needs of the Jewish people and by their ability to develop their homeland in accordance with the international covenant made with them."

Dewey said, "Now, even more than after the last war, it is essential that a way be found to open the doors of Palestine. This will be especially true if the doors elsewhere remain closed."

A resolution was adopted appealing to President Roosevelt for "appropriate action—to ensure the withdrawal in its entirety of the Palestine white paper of May, 1939. The resolution also urged that Palestine be opened to Jewish immigration and be reconstituted as a Jewish commonwealth."

Two postoffice employes suffered burns last night when two mail trucks caught fire in the repair shop of the City Postoffice garage, North Capitol st. and Massachusetts ave.

Roy Fisher, 45, of 6503 Third st. nw., was burned on his hand and leg and Harley H. Cummins, 42, of 4946 Butterworth st. nw., was burned on the face. Both were treated at the scene. The blaze was confined to the trucks.

Col. Carle's Wife Sues for Support

Col. Charles D. Carle, U. S. A., who is stationed at the Pentagon Building, was sued in District Court for maintenance yesterday by his wife, Catherine, who claims that she cannot support herself.

Stating her husband notified her two weeks ago that he was giving up their apartment at the Cairo Hotel, and that she should seek employment, she admitted a $150 a month maintenance offer. The suit states the Carles were married in 1919, and that Col. Carle earns $628.67 a month.

Berlin Fears U. S. Raids From Russia

Madrid, Nov. 1 (AP).—A report that Russian front air bases are to be made available to United States bombers for daylight attacks against eastern Germany were current in Berlin tonight.

Spanish correspondents in Berlin, who have repeatedly said that what worried the average Germans more than any battle front was the bombing from the west, now report that the same Germans fear the Moscow conference may bring the same type raids from the east, too.

Such a decision, it was recognized in Berlin, would bring Germany's eastern heavy industries under the pounding of Flying Fortresses which have already smashed deep into the Ruhr and Rhineland.

Berlin also was reported to have heard rumors of the possibility of a British-Russian-American offensive in Norway and Finland—an offensive which would concern Germany not only from the strategy viewpoint but from a morale angle.

The Moscow conference, according to Berlin rumors, has decided that the Allies should capitalize on the differences between Sweden and Germany, the resistance in Norway and Finland's desire for peace in a combined offensive to clear Scandinavia of the Germans.

Trade Board Opposes Street Name Changes

The directors of the Washington Board of Trade voted yesterday to oppose the National Capital Park and Planning Commission's proposal to change the name of two Washington streets; to oppose legislation requiring compulsory inspection of bicycles, and to support a bill increasing the number of midshipmen allowed at the Naval Academy from the District.

The board contended that "much confusion" would result from the street changes. The proposals are that 15th st., between I st. and Constitution ave., be renamed Vermont ave., and that 17th st., from Connecticut ave. to the John Paul Jones statue be renamed Connecticut ave.

As to the bill to provide for the inspection and registration of bicycles in the District, the board found itself in sympathy with only that part of the legislation which would provide for registration. Inspection alone would not reduce the number of bicycles operating with mechanical defects or the accidents caused by those defects, the board believes.

The number of midshipmen from the District now allowed at the Naval Academy is five. The approved bill would provide for 15. Although the District exceeds 14 individual States in population, each of these States has from three to five times the number of midshipmen in the Academy as the District, it was pointed out.

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, October 26, 1943—A public hearing having been held by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia on October 11, 1943, in the matter of closing certain streets, roads and alleys in the District of Columbia, as hereinafter described, and the said Commissioners being satisfied as to the equity, justice and advisability of said closings, and that the same will not be detrimental to the public interests, NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the said Commissioners have prepared the following order: "ORDERED, that pursuant to the provisions of Public Act No. 307, approved December 15, 1932, the street, road and alley areas as shown in green on plats filed in the Office of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia and numbered as Maps 2902, 2903, 2904, 2905, 2906 and 2907, are hereby ordered CLOSED, same to take effect on and after NOVEMBER 26, 1943, the title to the land contained in said areas so closed to revert to the abutting property owners, as shown on said maps; the said areas hereby ordered closed being described as follows: 1. Closing part of Brandywine Street west of First Street, S.E., closing parts of Chesapeake Street between First Street and Livingston Road, S.E., and closing of public alleys, all in the area adjacent to Square 6169 and S-6169, and abutting U. S. Reservation No. 501; and including a transfer of jurisdiction to Commissioners, D. C., for public alley in Square 6169. 2. Closing of a public alley extending north from Alabama Avenue and abutting 24th Street, S.E., in Square 5868. 3. Closing of a public alley extending south from C Street, S.E., in Square 763. 4. Closing part of Lamont Street between Hiatt Place and 16th Street, N.W., abutting Square 2673 and 2675. 5. Closing streets and alleys in the Southeast Section abutting U. S. Reservation No. 519 and adjacent property owned by the United States, viz: Closing parts of Pomeroy Road and Stanton Road westerly from Sheridan Road; closing Sheridan Road between Pomeroy Road and Stanton Road; closing part of Jasper Road south of Sheridan Road; closing Hartford Street between 15th Place and Morris Road; closing parts of 17th and 18th Streets adjacent to Hartford Street; closing Morris Road from Gainesville Street to the westerly boundary of Garfield Heights Subdivision; closing parts of alleys and parts of Irving, Jasper, 21st, 22nd and 23rd Streets in the Garfield Heights Subdivision and in and adjacent to Square 5846; including a transfer of jurisdiction to Commissioners, D. C., for alleys in Squares 5821, 5836, 5846, 5849 and 5840. 6. Closing streets and alleys in the Southeast Section within the area lying southwest of Massachusetts Avenue between Branch Avenue and 39th Street, viz: Closing N Street between Branch Avenue and 33rd Place; closing 33rd Place and part of 34th Street between N and O Streets; closing parts of O Street between Pope Street and 39th Street and west of Texas Avenue; closing Nash Street between 34th Street and Texas Avenue; closing 34th Street between Nash Street and Pope Street; closing part of 35th Street south of Nash Street; closing part of 37th Place south of Nash Place; closing part of 38th Street south of O Street; closing part of Nash Place between 37th Place and Texas Avenue; closing part of Texas Avenue southwest of Massachusetts Avenue, and closing alley areas in Squares 5509, 5510, 5512 and 5513; including transfers of jurisdiction to Commissioners, D. C., over land at this location for street and alley purposes." Any and all parties interested must file objections, if any, in writing, to said closings, or as to any item or items providing for the closings listed above, within thirty (30) days after the date of this publication as indicated at the beginning hereof, addressed to the Commissioners, D. C.; otherwise said order shall become effective on NOVEMBER 26, 1943, and the street, road and alley areas as herein described shall on and after said effective date become closed in accordance with the provisions of said Public Act No. 307, approved December 15, 1932. JOHN RUSSELL YOUNG, C. W. KUTZ, GUY MASON, Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

RIGHT AROUND HOME — By Dudley Fisher

YOU WEEL BE VERY COMFORT--- DE SOLDIARS HAVE GOOD GNARDERS NOW.
I'LL BE SEEIN' PLENTY OF YOU ANYHOW.
HOKY SMOKES---
HERE-COME ON---QUICK---
BOSHE MOVE!
NADA---THIS HERE'S TH' FOIST CHANCE I'VE HAD TTELL YA--- I LOVE YA, HONEY.
OH-H JERREE--- I AM SCARE--- OH-H JERREE--- DEY GONE TO BOMB 'OSPITAL.

JANE ARDEN — A Price — By Monte Barrett and Russell Ross

SO THAT'S WHY YOU SENT ME AWAY?
YOU KNOW BETTER THAN THAT- I ONLY TRIED TO HELP YOU-TAKING ADVANTAGE OF THIS INNOCENT GIRL THE MINUTE MY BACK WAS TURNED-
HOW ABOUT THIS APARTMENT- WHO PAID FOR IT?
MR. STUN- HE WAS SO GENEROUS-
BAH! BLACKMAIL- HOW MUCH DO YOU WANT?
$100,000- AND YOU'RE GETTING OFF EASY- I SHOULD ASK A MILLION!

SUPERMAN — Hear Superman 5:45 P.M. Today—WOL — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

YOU CLAIM THAT NEW-FANGLED CANNON OF YOURS CAN FIRE A SMALL BULLET WITH SUFFICIENT FORCE TO DESTROY EVEN ME--AND I'M NOT AT ALL SURE IT CAN'T. SO- WHAT ARE YOU WAITING FOR?
YOU THEEM IN A GREAT HURRY TO LOTHE YOUR LIFE, THUPERMAN!
NOT AT ALL. BUT YOU SAID YOUR WEAPON CONTAINS ONLY ONE BULLET. I WANT YOU TO SHOOT IT BEFORE A CROWD GATHERS AND SOMEBODY ELSE GETS HURT.
SUPERMAN! YOU'VE CAPTURED THEM!
JUTHT THE OPPOTHITE MITH LANE!
I DON'T MIND SAYING YOU'VE CHOSEN A VERY IN-OPPORTUNE MOMENT FOR YOUR ENTRANCE MISS LANE!
NO DOUBT MISS LANE IS THE "CROWD" YOU WERE AFRAID WOULD GATHER. WELL, SHE'LL HAVE THE PLEASURE OF WATCHING HER INDE-STRUCTIBLE HERO MEET HIS DEATH!

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — By Clifford McBride

SAY, MISTER — I'M DRIVING AROUND TOWN LOOKING FOR A BIG STRAY DOG. HAVE YOU SEEN HIM?
I DON'T KNOW. IS HE ABOUT TH' SIZE OF TH' ONE FOLLOWING YOU?

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — She-Curity — By Milton Caniff

THE LIEUTENANT WILL SHOW YOU TO THE ADJUTANT, FLIGHT LIEUTENANT BONNY!
THANK YOU, COL. CORKIN!
HIYA, TAFFY! POWDER YOUR STETHOSCOPE AND I'LL TAKE YOU TO TIFFIN!
FLIP, I HEARD AN R.C.A.F. PILOT JUST CAME IN...
YEP! IN A SPITFIRE... WHY?
I HEARD HE'S VERY HANDSOME... WEARS A BLUE UNIFORM... HAS A MUSTACHE... AND A NICE DIMPLE IN HIS CHIN...
SERGEANT, SEE THAT A DOUBLE GUARD IS PLACED AROUND THE HOSPITAL! INFORMATION OF A NATURE DESIGNED TO AFFECT THE MORALE OF AMERICAN TROOPS IS FILTERING INTO THE NURSES' QUARTERS BY SOME SWIFT AND UNKNOWN MEANS...

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — By Dale Allen

YOU IN BED-ROOM D...! OPEN UP! WE'RE POLICE OFFICERS!
PLEASE...!
I'M SORRY--BUT I DON'T WANT TO BE DISTURBED-- I'M OLD ...AND NOT FEELING WELL!
OKAY, LADY! YOU SOUND LIKE A PERSON WE COULD TRUST! JUST TELL US--HAVE YOU SEEN A DARK-HEADED GIRL, WEARIN' A BLUE DRESS AND A HAT WITH A VEIL--?
I--I DON'T WANT TO DO WRONG BY YOU--BUT I CAN'T LIE TO THEM...!

MICKEY FINN — Money Talks — By Lank Leonard

PHIL WON'T BE HOME FOR SUPPER, MRS. FINN?
NO, FLOSSIE— HE'S RUNNING TRUE TO FORM! HE SAID HE'S DINING DOWN TOWN BECAUSE HE WANTS TO MAKE AN APPOINTMENT WITH HIS TAILOR! HIS TAILOR! HOW DO YOU LIKE THAT?
I CAME IN TO SEE ABOUT A SUIT!
OUR SUITS START AT $100!
WELL, GET THEM STARTED!
WAIST-46
46!

MR. AND MRS. — A Minor Casualty of the War — By Arthur Folwell and Ellison Hoover

JOE, WHERE IS THE CRIMEA?
HUH? WHY-ER- DOWN IN THE SOUTH OF EUROPE SOMEWHERE
WELL, IF YOU DON'T KNOW, GET OUT THE ATLAS AND LET'S SEE OKAY
THERE YOU ARE! YOU'LL FIND IT SOMEWHERE AROUND THE BLACK SEA
COULDN'T YOU HAVE LOOKED IT UP FOR ME?
JOE GREEN! LOOK AT MY SKIRT! ALL THIS RUST FROM THE BINDING OF THAT BOOK!
SAY, I PAID TWO DOLLARS A MONTH FOR THOSE BOOKS TWENTY YEARS AGO!

DIXIE DUGAN — Lose Interest — By J. P. McEvoy and H. J. Striebel

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — So Sorry — By Frank Martinek

AS LONG AS YOU DON'T HAVE TO MARRY TH' GUY UNTIL HE'S WELL AGAIN AND WORKING YOU HAVE A LITTLE TIME TO GET WORKING
I DON'T UNDERSTAND YOU ????
WHILE HE'S CONVALESCING MAKE HIM LOSE INTEREST IN YOU
??? HOW ?
BY MAKING YOURSELF AS UN-ATTRACTIVE AS POSSIBLE
I DON'T KNOW WHETHER I LIKE THAT ROUTINE OR NOT
IT WON'T BE SO BAD --WAIT A MINNIT-- I'LL SHOW YOU WHAT I MEAN

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — By Saunders and Woggon

I REPRESENT THE BLACK DRAGON SOCIETY WHOSE IMPERIAL AIMS ARE ASIA FOR THE ASIATICS!
YOU MEAN THE MOST DASTARDLY MURDER CLUB IN ASIA!
PERHAPS, BUT YOU, LIKE ALL OCCIDENTALS, DO NOT UNDERSTAND US JAPANESE!
WE UNDERSTAND YOU BETTER THAN YOU THINK-- WE REMEMBER PEARL HARBOR!
WINSLOW, YOU ARE A BRAVE BUT IMPETUOUS ENEMY! YOU WILL LISTEN OR SUFFER THE PENALTY OF THE SACRED WARRIORS BAND!

WINNIE WINKLE — The Subject and the Object — By Branner

I'M LIEUTENANT BRETT, OF NAVAL INTELLIGENCE! --AND I'VE BEEN LOOKING FOR YOU ALL MORNING, ROPER!
WE'VE BEEN OUT BUYIN' DUDS FOR A HITCHIN' PARTY!
I'M IN A HURRY-- GETTING MARRIED AT NINE O'CLOCK!
MARRIED? I DON'T SEE HOW--
LOOK! WHY DON'T YOU COME TO THE CHURCH WITH US? YOU'LL SEE THE PRETTIEST BRIDE SINCE EVE SAID "I DO!"
I'M AFRAID THAT WILL HAVE TO WAIT! MY ORDERS ARE TO BRING YOU AT ONCE TO THE HEAD OF THE DEPARTMENT!

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED — By Zane Grey

YOU TOLD OUR NEIGHBORS SOME KIND OF SCANDAL-- WHY DISCRIMINATE AGAINST ME!
WELL, WINKLE, WHEN A WOMAN COMES HOME AT ALL HOURS WITH ANOTHER MAN-- AND IN HIS CAR--
-WELL, IT ALWAYS SEEMS THAT TH' LAST ONE TO HEAR ABOUT IT, IS TH' HUSBAND!
-HEE-HEE-HEE- AIN'T IT TH' TRUTH?!
-WELL-ER-THAT'S WHY- IF YOU HAVEN'T FOUND OUT -ER-UH- I HATE TO BE THE ONE TO TELL YOU!!
ME?

KING, GO BACK! LONG ARROW WILL SHOOT YOU IF HE THINKS DIABLO INTENDS TO HARM THAT INDIAN GIRL!
PENNY EES RIGHT! YOU'RE IN A SPOT, KING! I CAN KEEL ALL OF YOU IN ANY ORDER I CHOOSE! HA, HA!
I CAN'T RISK A FLYING TACKLE-- THAT GIRL'S IN THE WAY...
BLAZING, UNHEEDED IN THE BACKGROUND THE WRECKED GYPSY WAGON, IGNITED BY DIABLO, IS DESTINED TO PLAY AN IMPORTANT ROLE!

Miss Teen

HAS A WORLD OF HER OWN ...
AND 4 SHOPS OF HER OWN ...
ON THE HECHT CO'S 2nd. FLOOR

MISS TEEN has a world of her own, but she's no Ivory Tower gal! She has her parties and her coke dates, but bends a mean arm rolling Red Cross bandages . . . Her class in World Events is as important as Dancing Class . . . She tucks a little hairbow in her curls, and in the twinkle of her eye sets a record when it comes to Salvage Drives . . . That's her world! And because we're glad she's in it, we've devoted four shops at The Hecht Co. especially to her. A Dress Shop, Coat Shop, Sports Shop and Accessory Bar, all together in one Department, where she can find the clothes she likes . . . from a zany hairbow to a tufted white coat, from a perky plaid shirtwaist to a romantic-as-moonlight tulle dance dress . . . all of them designed especially for Miss Teen . . . just right for Miss "10 to 16 years old."

Miss Teen Shops, 2nd Floor, The Hecht Co.
